FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

Caribbean Command
BY LT. GEN. WILLIAM H. H. MORRIS, JR.
Commanding General

ON the ground, on the sea, and in the air, the Armed Forces of the Caribbean are joined together for unified defense of this great area. This unified force is known as Caribbean Command.

The physical headquarters for these Armed Forces is located at Quarry Heights, Canal Zone, a site high on Ancon Hill overlooking the Panama Canal and military installations on the Pacific shore. Ever since the old Canal Rock Quarry closed down in the year 1914, Quarry Heights has housed a military headquarters. It has been host to great numbers of American and foreign diplomats and very important military personnel, and it has seen thousands of officers and enlisted men who have served here. Quarry Heights has served the military honorably through two World Wars.

Today, Caribbean Command presents a picture of unification. It is a study in joint military action ever poised to fulfill its assigned mission of defending the Panama Canal and the United States' interests in the Caribbean Area.

Caribbean Command was organized as a joint command in the year 1947. It exercises operational control over all the military forces assigned in the Caribbean Command area of responsibility. This area reaches deep into the vastness of South America and north into Central America.

The Command, rarely noticed in the headlines of the world's newspapers, assuredly is of vital importance to United States policy makers and to the strategic defense of our nation. At the crossroads of the Americas are found representatives from most of the world's nations who are living and working in close relationship, practically astride the strategic lifeline which joins the East and the West.

Caribbean Command supervises the overall programs of its Army, Navy and Air Force forces. The Command lays down broad uniform administrative and logistic rules for the components to follow, and maintains operational control over all the fighting arms inherently within the area.

In addition to the role of protecting the Panama Canal in event of attack, Caribbean Command has numerous other missions. Some of these missions include

Navy Selection Boards

Five Navy selection boards are now meeting to recommend officers of the various Navy Staff Corps for promotion to the grades of Captain and Commander.

Convened on 7 Nov., the boards are expected to complete their work next week. They are considering some 2,500 officers.

Under consideration for promotion are commanders in the Dental, Supply, Chaplain and Medical Corps; and lieutenant commanders in the Dental, Civil Engineer, Supply, Chaplain, Medical, Medical Service and Nurse Corps.

Eligible officers, the Navy said, are those whose General Line running mates were eligible. In the case of Line officers, they were eligible if they had the following service in grade as of 30 June 1951, computed from their date of rank, excluding appointments of limited duration: commanders—five years; lieutenant commanders—four years.

The promotion zones terminate as follows:

Commanders

Medical Corps—William N. New
Dental Corps—William H. Snyder
Chaplain Corps—John D. Zimmerman
Supply Corps—Chas. H. Kretz, Jr.

Lieutenant Commanders

Dental Corps—Leroy R. Frantz
Civil Engineer Corps—Robt. E. Thomas, Jr.
Supply Corps—Leon C. Covell, Jr.
Chaplain Corps—Aln R. Reed
Medical Corps—Scott Whitehouse
Medical Service Corps*—C. V. Timberlake, Jr.

There are no Nurse Corps officers in the promotion zone, the Navy said. All Nurse Corps officers under consideration are senior to the zone.

*Does not include women.

Gen. Bradley's Warning

Nothing would put the United States in greater danger than a partial demobilization when the Korean war is brought to a successful conclusion. Instead a "greater degree of readiness" must be achieved if the nation is not to be placed in jeopardy.

This was the message delivered yesterday, 17 Nov., by General of the Army Omar N. Bradley before the Associated Press Managing Editors Association at Atlanta, Ga.

The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff declared it a "bruising and shocking fact" that when Americans were committed in Korea, "we were left without an adequate margin of military strength with which to face an enemy at any other specific point. Certainly," General Bradley said, "we were left without the strength to meet a general attack. In the military sense, the free world was left without adequate reserves except for the atomic bomb."

General Bradley warned that "we cannot continue this unnecessary jeopardy to our own security. As a first step, we must build the forces—our own and our allies—in Western Europe, as well as in the United States—which can prevent disaster and afford effective retaliation."

What the building of this force will mean to the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps and the civilian components was described by General of the Army Bradley as follows:

"We are going to propose Armed Forces which will solve the three-fold military problem as well as we possibly can. The number of combat air groups which the Joint Chiefs of Staff propose for the remainder of this fiscal year will be larger than the air forces that exist today."

Army Promotes 651 More To Temp. Capt.

(Names on Back Page)

The Army this week announced temporary promotions for 651 first lieutenants to the rank of captain, effective 10 Nov.

Included among the third increment of first lieutenants promoted to temporary captain were 73 Regulars and 578 non-Regulares.

The first group of first lieutenants advanced to temporary captain as a result of the post-Korean expansion program included 2,218 officers, whose names were published in the 30 Sept. issue of THE JOURNAL and whose promotions were effective 27 Sept. The first list included 380 Regulars and 1,838 non-Regulares.

Then, on 21 Oct., THE JOURNAL published the names of 1,613 more first lieutenants advanced to temporary captain, effective 17 Oct. Of this number, 457 were Regulars and 1,156 were non-Regulares.

This means that including the third list of promotions, announced this week, a total of 4,482 first lieutenants have been advanced to temporary captain in the past three months. Regulars promoted total 910 and non-Regular promotions to temporary captain have gone to 3,572 first lieutenants.

The anticipation is that a fourth list of officers selected for temporary promotion will be released before the end of the year.

The zone of consideration for the third group of first lieutenants receiving promotions extended through Promotion List Number 15427 for Regular officers. The cut-off date for non-Regulares was 13 Jan. 1946.

The second list of promotions to temporary captains extended through Promotion List Number 15340 for Regulars, with 22 Sept., 1945, as the cut-off date for non-Regulares. This means that the third group of lieutenants included 87 additional Regulars considered, with the cut-off date for non-Regulares was advanced almost four months.

For the initial group of first lieutenants, the Army considered Regulars through Promotion List Number 14828 and 30 Apr., 1945, was the cut-off date for non-Regulares.

According to an unofficial tabulation, the Army now has announced a total of 10,303 temporary promotions to the ranks of captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel as a result of the expansion program.

Undoubtedly, hundreds of additional promotions will be announced before the end of the year.

The next list probably will be lieutenant colonels promoted to the temporary rank of colonel.

However, there is a possibility that the Army may release a new list of captains receiving temporary promotions to major before the advancements to the rank of colonel are announced.

Army Navy Air Force Journal

New York Herald Tribune—"General Marshall's choice of Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg as Assistant Secretary of Defense deserves warm praise. *** Mrs. Rosenberg is entitled to thanks for her prompt acceptance of so heavy a responsibility."

New York Times—"Once described as 'the busiest woman in New York,' Mrs. Rosenberg is soon going to be just about the busiest woman in the United States . . . We are fully confident she will carry out her manifold duties with the skill and ability that she has shown in her many other official positions in the past . . . Her selection by General Marshall for this important position is a well-merited tribute, both to Mrs. Rosenberg and to the opportunity that is inherent in America."

David Lawrence, Columnist—"Anna Rosenberg is known not only among the military but among industrial executives as an expert in personnel problems. . . . She was given an important assignment in 1944 and 1945 as the personal representative of the President in reporting on personnel problems in the European theater of war, where she won the praise of General Eisenhower and General Bradley, being the first civilian to be awarded the Medal of Freedom. . . . If anybody can keep the top brass from becoming upset by industrial relations problems and personnel questions having to do with reservists and the wise use of manpower as contrasted with the waste that has so often crept in, it is Anna Rosenberg."

Cleveland Press—"There are good reasons to applaud General Marshall's choice of Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg for his Assistant Secretary of Defense in charge of manpower and personnel policy. Her fellow citizens have long known and admired Mrs. Rosenberg as an expert peacemaker in labor disputes, also as a profound student of labor relations and of the men and motives involved in such disputes."

Norfolk Virginian-Pilot—"As Assistant Secretary of Defense, Mrs. Rosenberg would hold the highest position which a woman has ever held in that department and the highest position in the Federal establishment which a woman has ever held with the exception of Miss Frances Perkins, long-time Secretary of Labor in the Roosevelt administration. . . . She is in brief an experienced expert—a pro—in a field of rising importance during a period when the virtue of new ideas and the value of competent advice were increasingly recognized in both government and private industry. These qualities—and not any desire to 'recognize' women—explain why Secretary Marshall turned to her for the direction of manpower policies in the Department of Defense."

THE WAR IN KOREA

FIGHTING in zero and sub-zero temperatures United Nations forces advanced slowly this week on all fronts in Korea, against light to moderate resistance. Gains of several miles were scored through snow and ice over terrain swept by wintry blasts.

Chinese Reds, now constituting the principal opposition to Allied troops, were content for the most part to remain on the defensive, and in some places had entirely withdrawn their troops. In a few isolated instances Communist troops launched local counter-attacks of a minor nature.

In the extreme northwestern section of Korea the Chinese Reds continued to use Russian-built jet aircraft to attack Allied planes along the border just south of the Yalu River. The Red planes did not venture far south of the border, and were always ready to flee to safe sanctuary on the Manchurian side of the boundary when attacked.

Under current orders United Nations planes are prevented from pursuing enemy aircraft into Manchuria. Despite this handicap several enemy jets were shot down, and damage to our planes has been disproportionately small.

In ground operations on the northwestern front, where from 60,000 to 70,000 Chinese Red troops are concentrated, American and South Korean divisions moved slowly forward in a limited, but coordinated advance, cautiously avoiding exposure to ambuscades. It had been expected that Communist troops would attempt to mount a new general offensive in this area, following up their successes of two weeks ago. However, they appeared content with defensive action, possibly awaiting the outcome of diplomatic maneuvering within the United Nations.

The United States Army 24th Division continued aggressive patrolling throughout its zone, keeping in contact with the enemy, but failing to uncover any extended Red troop dispositions in this area. There were indications that the enemy had hastily evacuated positions, leaving behind quantities of ammunition. Patrols from the South Korean 1st Division found 300 enemy dead southeast of Pakchon, where a sharp encounter had previously occurred. The patrols reported that the enemy was withdrawing.

Elements of the United States 1st Cavalry Division advanced slowly through difficult terrain and developed some enemy resistance in the vicinity of Wonsan. Patrols entered the walled city near Yongbyon. In the Takchon area the South Korean 8th Division was heavily engaged with enemy forces.

On the other side of the Korean peninsula in the northeast sector the United States 1st Marine Division and the American Army 7th Division reached the large Changjin and Pujon reservoirs, secondary sources of power for many Korean and Manchurian industries. Marines advancing in bitter cold weather took Hagaru at the southern tip of the Changjin reservoir, and 15 miles to the northeast elements of the 7th Division reached the shore of the Pujon reservoir.

No Communist opposition was encountered by either force, despite the fact that a few days previously there were heavy concentrations of enemy troops guarding the two reservoirs. Hydro-electric power plants a few miles below the reservoirs were largely intact, though there was evidence that the Reds had begun to dismantle these installations before abandoning them.

American intelligence officers are unable to account for the lack of opposition, since it was supposed that one reason for Chinese Red intervention in Korea was to protect these facilities, as well as the larger dams and power plants along the Yalu River.

Near the east coast of the Korean peninsula the enemy attacked with an attempted double envelopment against advance units of the South Korean Capital Division, forcing a withdrawal to positions south of the Myonggan-Chon River. A subsequent counter-attack wiped out an enemy bridgehead and forced the Reds to withdraw to the north bank of the river where they are digging in.

The U. S. Navy heavy cruiser Rochester, accompanied by the destroyer Hank, steamed north along the east coast to furnish naval gun fire in support of the Capital division. Using helicopters as spotters the 8-inch guns of the Rochester laid down a heavy bombardment on enemy gun positions and troop concentrations, maintaining a harassing fire day and night, which greatly aided the South Koreans in stopping the Red attack.

In the extreme northeast sector the 17th and 31st infantry regiments of the American Army 7th Division moved to within 20 miles of the Manchurian border over difficult terrain and in sub-zero weather. Our troops encountered some enemy opposition, but managed to make steady progress.

While no effort is made by the Allied forces to maintain a continuous line across the Korean peninsula patrols from the east coast have made contact with elements in the mountainous center. The United States Army 3d Division, which recently landed at Wonsan, sent patrols inland to contact South Korean forces, which in turn are in touch with Allied divisions in the northwest sector along the Chongchon River and the west coast.

While the bulk of the enemy is now believed to be concentrated in the northwest there are units of varying size in other sectors, including guerrilla bands in mountain pockets well behind our lines. Excellent progress has been made in wiping out the guerrillas in South Korea, but north of the 38th Parallel there are numerous bands which are making considerable trouble.

Combat patrols of the United States Army 2d Division discovered two underground munitions factories in the Hyangmung-ni area. Philippine army units attacked a group of 300 guerrillas near Singye, inflicting 117 casualties and dispersing the remainder of the band. South Korean troops and special units routed guerrilla bands in the Pyonggang-Hwachon area, with heavy loss to the enemy.

Air Force and Naval planes, in addition to furnishing tactical air support to ground troops, attacked enemy installations in the extreme northern zone of Korea and blasted the southern spans of bridges crossing the Yalu River from Manchuria. Several of these bridges were heavily damaged.

While the damage to the Yalu River bridges will hamper the movement of Chinese troops and supplies into Korea from Manchuria the effect at best will be temporary. In the intense cold of late December the Yalu River freezes to a depth sufficient to support the movement of troops and heavy equipment across the river on the ice.

Carrier-based planes flew inland to attack a military camp and troop concentration area at Hyesanjin, just inside the Korean border from Manchuria. The strike was exceptionally successful, and the camp was left a burning mass of ruins.

Skyraiders, Corsairs and Panther jet planes joined in the attack, using general purpose bombs, rockets and napalm. Each of the Skyraiders was armed with two 11-inch Tiny Tim rockets, each of which is said to have the penetrating power of a 16-inch projectile fired from a battleship. Two ammunition houses at the camp were hit by rockets and disintegrated in a tremendous blast. A second strike at Kapsan destroyed four buildings in a barracks area.

Eighteen Air Force B-29 medium bombers, flying near the Manchurian border in northwest Korea, were attacked by a formation of 8 to 10 unmarked Russian-built MIG-15 jet fighters, and two of our planes were damaged, necessitating emergency landings at Kimpo airfield, near Seoul. One of the enemy jet planes was shot down and the others returned to a base in Manchuria.

Other B-29 Superfortresses dropped fire bombs on Manpojin, on the north central border; Sochon, on the northwest coast, and Puckchin, northwest of Onjung. Fires and heavy smoke indicated excellent results from each strike.

Light bombers of the 5th Air Force struck military installations at Huchang, blowing up a large ammunition warehouse. Other B-26 light bombers using napalm set fire to warehouses and other military installations in a long attack on Pihyon.

Despite low visibility due to snow flurries Allied F-80 jets and F-51 Mustangs pounded the enemy in close support of advancing United Nations ground troops in the Yongbyon area. Four artillery positions were knocked out, 3 tanks were destroyed, 5 others damaged, 10 supply buildings were burned to the ground, and 30 others were set afire.

A flight of F-51 fighters destroyed a large fuel dump near Sakchu, along the northwest border of Korea. Fifty-five loaded fuel trucks moving southward were also knocked out. Violent explosions resulted, with smoke billowing up to 3,000 feet. Two antiaircraft positions protecting the dump were destroyed.

Cargo planes continued to take heavy tonnages of supplies from Japan to Korea. Winter weather, with snow and ice, handicapped the delivery of supplies by road to ground troops in the extreme north, but the situation was eased somewhat by the opening of ports on both the east and west coasts.

Press dispatches indicated that some of the United Nations troops were suffering through lack of heavy winter clothing. Large stocks of such clothing are on hand in Korea, and most of the troops have complete equipment. However, because of difficulty in maintaining road connections with advanced elements there may be some units still without adequate clothing. However, this condition is rapidly being remedied.

Military Surgeons

Dr. Robert C. Cook of the Veterans Administration became president of the Association of Military Surgeons at the closing session of their annual meeting 11 Nov. in New York City.

Rear Adm. Winchell McK. Craig, MC, USNR, who was second vice president and would automatically have become first vice president this year and president next year, voluntarily stepped aside so that the Surgeon General of the Air Force, Maj. Gen. Harry G. Armstrong, could be nominated and elected first vice president. Thus, next year the Air Force will have its first representation in the presidency of the organization.

Admiral Craig remained as second vice president and thus will follow General Armstrong as president. Col. Carl Hanna of the Michigan National Guard was elected sixth vice president, the intervening officers retaining their present positions. Col. James M. Phalen, USA-Ret., is secretary.

The Association adopted a resolution recommending utilization of selective service men with lower induction standards. The text of the resolution follows: "Whereas, our country faces a shortage of man power, in the event of full mobilization for both production of war material, and for man power to serve in the armed forces, . . .

"And Whereas, it has heretofore been customary only to accept men for the armed forces with a very high physical standard of acceptance.

"And Whereas, because the utility of many men is possible, in the armed forces, who are unable to meet the high physical standards but are still able to perform useful duties in the armed forces, when assigned to duties which would not handicap them further, and which their physical condition would permit them to perform,

"Therefore, we, the Association of Military Surgeons of the U. S. in convention assembled, recommend a re-study of the standards for acceptance in the armed forces of the nation with a view to utilize all the available man power of the nation, needed for military duty, by lowering the standards of acceptability for induction of all men in a given age group, but making a division, as to the assignment so that the physically fit be kept in one armed service class, and those accepted with physical defects be kept in a separate class, and assigned to special duty not inconsistent to their physical handicap."

Test New Uniform

Army Quartermaster officials have issued a total of 81 new-type uniforms for members of the WAC, Nurse Corps and Women's Medical Specialist Corps personnel on duty in the Washington area.

The new uniform has not yet been authorized for official wear by personnel other than those issued the new garb exclusively for testing purposes.

The uniform, shown for the first time at Governor's Island, N. Y., late in February, is being worn in Washington by 48 enlisted women and 33 officers.

They will be asked to submit comments to the Quartermaster General with recommendations for possible modification of the sample uniforms.

Army officials would not say when it is expected the new uniform will be made available on an Army-wide basis.

ASSIGNMENT OF TWINS

When no urgent military reason exists to the contrary, the policy of the Army is to assign twins to the same organization, unit, or station, providing they so desire.

Military Manpower

The swearing-in this week of Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg as Assistant Secretary of Defense, a new Army call for 40,000 draftees in January, the continuing Korean intervention of Chinese Communists and the imminent reconvening of Congress focused increased attention this week on problems relating to military manpower.

Serving under a recess appointment until her nomination is confirmed by the Senate, Mrs. Rosenberg has been charged by Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall with responsibility for manpower problems, including "the formalization of the proposals to the Congress regarding our system for raising and maintaining our Armed Forces."

On 14 Nov., one day before Mrs. Rosenberg was sworn into office by Felix Larkin, Department of Defense General Counsel, in a brief Pentagon ceremony, it was announced that the Selective Service System will supply 40,000 inductees during January for service with the Army.

The Defense announcement declared that "The Navy and Air Force have not requested inductees under the Selective Service Act for the current build-up of strength and do not plan to place calls for January."

It is known, however, that some military officials, particularly Army leaders, favor utilization of Selective Service by all the Uniformed Forces to curtail inter-Service competition for young men with particularly high mental and physical qualifications.

Presumably, early in her tenure as Assistant Secretary of Defense, Mrs. Rosenberg will be called upon to decide whether the Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps, in addition to the Army, will be required to obtain some of its manpower through Selective Service, which would mean that all of the Services, instead of just the Army, would be taking men with minimum General Classification Test ratings and reduced physical qualifications.

In an address this week before the Association of Land-Grant Colleges, Mr. Larkin revealed that with few exceptions all "non-deferable men" between 19 and 26 years of age ultimately will be called for military service.

In this regard, Mrs. Rosenberg, as the Defense manpower expert, is confronted with the fact that the available Selective Service potential is severely limited, a problem certain to command early attention by both the Senate and House Armed Services Committees, when work is resumed late this month.

The possibility exists that the term of duty under Selective Service will be increased from the present 21 months to two years and possibly to 30 months. Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director, has advocated such action.

Another manpower source would be made available if married men between the ages of 19 and 26 were made eligible for the draft. The point was made during recent Congressional enactment of legislation providing for family allowances to all enlisted personnel that since married men and fathers are being brought on active duty through recalls of Reservists and Federalization of National Guard units that married men between the ages of 19 and 26 also should be drafted.

There was a report this week that a special Defense committee, headed by Mr. Larkin and including the Joint Chiefs of Staff, already has initiated a preliminary study of manpower problems, including the possibility of combining features of the Selective Service Act and proposed Universal Military Training legislation.

The need for skilled direction in the formalization of a military manpower program designed to extend beyond the present Korean emergency was implicit in remarks made by Secretary Marshall on the occasion of a visit to his office by Mrs. Rosenberg on 10 Nov. Secretary Marshall said:

"I am delighted that I was successful in persuading Mrs. Rosenberg to undertake the Office of Assistant Secretary of Defense. During my few weeks as Secretary, I found tremendous pressures regarding manpower coming to me from no less than five different offices in the Defense Department and it was evident that the pressures would increase both from within and without the Department."

Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall confers with Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, of New York City, whom he recommended for appointment as Assistant Secretary of Defense to succeed Paul H. Griffith who resigned. Mrs. Rosenberg will specialize in matters pertaining to manpower and personnel.

ment relating to manpower in industry, manpower in the military forces and manpower in the administrative system and with relation to specialists in the scientific, engineering and allied fields. Preparing for this problem, I found the consensus of opinion was that one of the outstanding experts in the United States was Mrs. Anna Rosenberg.

"There was still another factor involved in this recommendation of mine. The Defense Department is confronted with the formalization of the proposals to the Congress regarding our system for raising and maintaining our armed forces. This involves the question of Universal Military Training and the Selective Service Act procedures. I knew of no one who had had more experience regarding these issues than Mrs. Rosenberg because of her previous contacts both within and without the Army and her six months service on the Compton Commission.

"Therefore, I feel that I personally and the Defense Department have been very fortunate in securing her reluctant agreement to serve as Assistant Secretary of Defense with special relation to manpower and personnel."

Aside from its effect on the civilian economy and on military production—certain subjects for close study by Mrs. Rosenberg and top personnel officials of the Armed Forces—the development of a long-range military manpower program will be characterized by two basic needs:

1. First and foremost, ways and means must be worked out to insure that active duty strengths of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps will be maintained at least at minimum security levels, first to deter aggressors from temptation to take advantage of weaknesses which would thwart instant and effective retaliation and to permit a strong counter-offensive in the event of attack.

2. Beyond this basic need, provision must be made for strengthening the mobilization base, which will mean bolstering the effectiveness of the Reserve units of the Services and the National Guard and Air National Guard.

Heads Defense Information

Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall has appointed Clayton Fritchey, of New Orleans, La., as Director of Public Information for the Department of Defense.

Mr. Fritchey, who since 1944 has been editor of the New Orleans Item, has been a newspaperman for more than 25 years. He was a reporter on the Baltimore American from 1924 to 1927, when he became assistant city editor of the Baltimore Post, going from there in 1929 to become night editor and assistant to the managing editor of the Pittsburgh Press. He returned to the Baltimore Post in 1931 as managing editor, remaining until 1934. He was a special writer for the Cleveland Press from 1934 to 1944. From 1938 to 1944 he was a correspondent for Time-Life. In 1937 he was recipient of an honorable mention Pulitzer Prize for public service. He has twice been awarded citations for articles in the public interest by the Newspaper Guild. He is a director of the National Foreign Policy Association and President of the New Orleans Foreign Policy Association.

Since February of this year, Osgood Roberts, Deputy Director of Public Information, has been serving as Acting Director.

Honor Gen. Pershing

General of the Army George C. Marshall, the Secretary of Defense, led a delegation to the grave of General of the Armies John J. Pershing in honor of his memory on Armistice Day, 11 Nov.

"General Pershing," Secretary Marshall said, "left a lasting impression on our Army and also on our people. He was a great soldier, without evasions, cool and determined in every crisis and capable of tremendous powers of command and control."

The full text of Secretary Marshall's remarks follow:

"This ceremony this morning is of deep personal significance to me because I was closely associated with General Pershing when he commanded the First Army during the St. Mihel and Meuse-Argonne Battles. Later, after the cessation of hostilities, I became his aide and served him for four years.

"When I returned to Washington in the summer of 1938 to become Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army and later Chief of Staff, I saw the General frequently; as a rule, regularly about once a week, and talked over the critical world situation or the progress of hostilities in which for a time we were not engaged.

"General Pershing left a lasting impression on our Army and also on our people. He was a great soldier, without evasions, cool and determined in every crisis and capable of tremendous powers of command and control."

Work on Battle Monuments

"On his death I succeeded him as Chairman of the Battle Monuments Commission. He devoted the last twenty years of his life almost exclusively to the direction of the work of that organization in establishing our National Military Cemeteries abroad.

"As Chairman of the Battle Monuments Commission, I am concerned with the final resting places of our deceased veterans in sacred plots of ground all over the world. There are 22 such cemeteries overseas, and in each we have erected, or are in process of erecting, a beautiful chapel containing a permanent graphic record in stone, bronze and mosaics of the achievements of the American forces who fought in these regions. Memorial references are included for those tens of thousands of missing or unidentified dead to whom the tragedies of war denied a known and honored burial. Their names will be inscribed on the walls for all to read.

"These memorials will serve to remind the peoples of Europe, Africa and the Far East that American men fought, bled, and died side by side with their own sons to make life more abundant for all of us.

"These chapel tributes to the heroism and sacrifices of our men and women are national in character and therefore far more enduring than any individual could provide. They are the product of the finest work of the most noted architects, sculptors, artists and landscape authorities in this country. As a nation we are entrusted with the honor of perpetuating these shrines and keeping them always beautiful.

Visit Cemeteries

"Each year official representatives of our Government and of the governments of the friendly countries in whose lands our men served and died, visit these cemeteries. Thousands of visitors from home and abroad also visit the cemeteries, especially during the summer months. These visits will be in increasing numbers when all the splendid structures and plantings are completed.

"Armistice Day this year has for us unusual significance. Earlier occasions were marked by special homage to those who gave their lives in the first World War, and later to the fallen in the recent world conflict. November eleventh this year we are also doing honor to four thousand or more of our men who recently gave their lives in Korea, and today at this very moment other names are surely being added to this list of sacrifices in our behalf.

"Each of these casualties represents a precious life, precious to the individual and precious to his family and friends. We can do nothing to restore life to these men, but we can keep faith with them, remembering and honoring their sacrifices and doing our very best to support the ideals they courageously represented. They will not be forgotten. Their Government will see that their last resting place is kept beautiful and peaceful, and a reminder to all peoples that we believe in the dignity of the individual and stand ready to make any sacrifice in defense of his inalienable rights."

AF Dental Post

Lt. Col. Francis J. Cummings, Travis AFB, Fairfield, Calif., has been recommended for assignment to head the dental service at George AFB, Victorville, Calif., and will report for duty in January 1951.

Army Secy. on Housing

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, who had told in his recently released semi-annual report how lack of housing was jeopardizing morale, this week renewed his plea for improved housing facilities for military personnel and their families.

He told the Economic Club of New York that the critical housing shortage must be solved if the soldier's family, basic unit of American life, is to be safeguarded.

The following is the excerpt from Secretary Pace's address:

"Another serious military problem in a time of semi-mobilization and one that has a great impact upon the moral and social structure of the country is that just because we are keeping men in the service for years, you can't expect them not to get married and have families. This is not only complicating everything we are doing, it is adding greatly to our cost estimates. Bachelor housing in troop barracks is one thing—but when you have to provide for families—and we can't deny these men the right to have families—that is another. In war-time soldiers accept long separations from their loved ones, and being moved around from camp to camp, but they would understandably feel different about it in peacetime. Yet, we haven't even been able to provide adequate family housing for the relatively small army we have had since the end of World War II."

"If we are correct that the basic unit of American life is the family, the Services will have to take a long, intelligent look at this thing to make sure that their policies help preserve that essential basic unit."

It is recalled that the semi-annual report of the Secretary of Defense, signed by Louis Johnson, declared that new legislation will be submitted to Congress to accelerate construction of housing for the Armed Forces.

Regular Army Integration

Under terms of Public Law 514 (May 1950) providing for integration into the Regular Army Nurse Corps and Women's Specialist Corps of officers who served during World War II, the Surgeon General has received to date 307 applications from Army nurses of which 84 have been nominated for appointment, 39 approved for nomination, and 28 approved pending physical clearance; 83 have been rejected as failing to meet physical and other requirements; the remaining cases are currently being reviewed.

Applications for Women's Medical Specialist Corps, Regular Army, have been received from 13 dietitians, 10 physical therapists, and two occupational therapists. Of these, 15 nominations for appointment have been made so far, including 7 dietitians, 7 physical therapists, and one occupational therapist; other applications are pending.

All applications for Regular Army under this legislation must be filed before 6 Dec. in order to receive consideration for appointment.

Army Dependents Travel

Travel of dependents of Army personnel to certain areas of the Pacific will be resumed immediately, the Army announced on 13 Nov.

All travel of dependents to the Pacific, including the Far East Command, was suspended following the outbreak of fighting in Korea.

The new announcement authorizes qualified dependent personnel to travel to Alaska and Hawaii.

Travel to the Far East Command and Indo-China is still suspended with the exception of those on present priority lists for the Marshall-Bonins, Philippine Command and Ryukyu Command.

Combat Commanders

The Army has directed that "immediate action" be taken to initiate the wearing of combat commanders identification.

The Army reminded in Circular No. 58 that for the purpose of determining authorization for combat commanders identification, officers assigned as commanders of combat units designated in paragraph 9, DA Circular 202, 1948, as amended by paragraph 2, DA Circular 315, 1948, will wear this identification.

The combat commanders identification is a green cloth sleeve, 1½ inches wide, worn in the middle of both shoulder loops of the coat, jacket, field jacket, overcoat, or shirt when worn as an outer garment.

Combat commanders identification will cease to be worn when an individual entitled thereto is reassigned from a command position or from a combat unit which entitled him to such identification.

Army Football

A 51-0 victory over New Mexico brought Army its 27th straight game without defeat at West Point last week-end.

The Cadets, with only two games remaining in their 1950 schedule—Stanford at Palo Alto today, and Navy at Philadelphia on 2 Dec.—give promise of closing their season with no losses.

Highly favored in the contest last Saturday, Army scored in each quarter, despite the fact that Gil Stephenson and Jim Cain, two of its first-string backs, were not even required to suit up for the game.

Led by Bob Blaik's passing, two long touchdown runs by Al Pollard, and scores by Jack Weaver, Eugene Filipski and Frank Fischl, the Cadets chalked up 23 points in the first half, and 28 in the last two periods. Pollard made all seven conversions good.

The Army team dropped to third place, however, in the weekly Associated Press poll.

Maximum Xmas Leaves

The Army has announced suspension of scheduled training for troops in the United States from 23 Dec. to 1 Jan., inclusive. This will utilize two legal holidays and two weekends, with a minimum loss of training days to give soldiers an opportunity to visit their families. It is expected that such opportunities will be granted to as many as can be spared.

In meeting the rigorous standards of the current training program, the Army said, the trainees have demonstrated a degree of progress which makes possible this short suspension of scheduled training. It was pointed out that the tempo of the program will be stepped up after the first of the year to the extent that further interruptions will be most unlikely.

Relocate Army Schools

The Armed Forces Information school and the Chaplains' school, now located at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., will move to Fort Slocum, N. Y., and the Army Security Agency school, also at Carlisle, will move to Fort Devens, Mass. Carlisle Barracks will become the permanent site of the reestablished Army War College, now temporarily located at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans.

The three schools now at Carlisle will complete their moves by 15 April. The Army War College will move to Carlisle Barracks during June and July 1951 following rehabilitation of the post.

Ammunition Center

The Army has announced establishment of an Ordnance Ammunition Center at the Joliet Arsenal, Ill., which will supervise and control expanded Ordnance ammunition activities in connection with the current expansion of the Army.

The Army said establishment of the center will decentralize the ammunition program to a point away from Washington, D. C., where most of the work was performed during World War II, thereby avoiding a personnel expansion for this purpose in the Capital.

Train Canadian Brigade

A 10,000-man Canadian brigade will train at Ft. Lewis, Wash., beginning late this month.

The Army said facilities at Fort Lewis were offered the Canadians for unit training exercises because weather conditions in Canada severely handicap such training during the winter months. Training in the United States will expedite the readiness of the unit.

Army Fabric Needs

The Army this week summoned fabric contractors to the New York Quartermaster Procurement Agency to discuss acceleration of deliveries on certain textiles.

The action was taken because of the needs for winter fighting in Korea, the Army said.

New Army Uniform

Although Army officials declined to discuss details and explained in response to queries, that it is only part of routine experimental uniform studies, it became known this week that consideration is being given to the possibility of a winter gray uniform instead of the present olive drab color.

The uniform was modeled at a "secret" session of top officials at the Pentagon, but it is emphasized that there are no plans for its immediate adoption.

In fact, it is not certain that the gray uniform will ever be adopted for Army use. The Army says that studies regarding uniform items are continuous and they add that the model gray uniforms were developed as part of these tests.

It is certain that should a decision be made sometime in the future to switch from the olive drab to gray uniform the Army would issue such information well in advance in order to protect personnel from unnecessary uniform expenditures.

In view of this important factor, some criticism was expressed at the absence of a formal Army statement reassuring personnel that the gray uniform is strictly experimental.

President Praises General

President Truman this week commended Maj. Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer, USA, for his work as director of the Office of Military Assistance.

General Lemnitzer is leaving for Ft. Benning, Ga., to attend the airborne school, after which he is slated to command a division, probably the 11th Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

The President extended his congratulations to General Lemnitzer at a private White House interview.

Awarded DFC

Lt. Col. John H. Daly, FA, who commanded the 555th Field Artillery Battalion of the Fifth Regimental Combat Team in Korea has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action near Pongamni, Korea, on 10 Aug. Colonel Daly was twice wounded in that action and is now a patient at Letterman Army Hospital, San Francisco.

Gen. Hughes To NSRB

Maj. Gen. Everett S. Hughes, USA-Ret., former Army Chief of Ordnance, has been named by Chairman W. Stuart Symington of the National Security Resources Board as Director of the Office of Energy and Utilities.

He succeeds Mr. Edward Falck, who was serving as a consultant on an intermittent basis.

Army Art Contest

The Army has announced that exhibition and final judging of entries in the All-Army Art Contest will take place on or about 8 Oct. 1951 at the Pentagon.

Preliminary elimination contests are to be held throughout the Army and details are described in Circular No. 60, just released.

New RCA Theatre Television System projects 15 x 20 foot pictures of television programs.

Giant size Television—"shot from a Barrel!"

You've seen television. Now you'll see it in its finest form — giant projections of special events, transmitted only to theatres on private wires or radio beams to make movie-going better than ever!

Success of the system comes from a remarkable RCA kinescope, and something new in projection lenses. The kinescope, developed at RCA Laboratories, is in principle the same as the one on which you see regular telecasts. But this modified kinescope is small—only a few inches in diameter—and produces images of high brilliance. These are magnified to 15 x 20 feet by a "Schmidt-type" lens system like those used in the finest astronomical telescopes.

Because of its size and shape, the new projector is referred to by engineers as the "barrel." It's already going into theatres, where you'll be seeing giant television—shot from a barrel.

SecNav in Pacific

Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews will leave the Philippines tomorrow morning, 19 Nov., for Okinawa. Following a brief stop there, he will continue to Tokyo for conferences with General Douglas MacArthur and Vice Adm. Charles T. Joy, Commander of U. S. Naval Forces in the Far East.

Mr. Matthews departed from Washington on 12 Nov., on a 20-day inspection tour of U. S. Naval activities in the Pacific and Far East, including conferences with the United Nations Commander and top U. S. Navy commanders.

At Pearl Harbor, first stop on his itinerary, Mr. Matthews conferred with Admiral Arthur W. Radford, Commander in Chief of the Pacific and Commander Fleet. From there he flew to Guam to inspect Naval installations, and continued on to the Philippines.

Following his Tokyo visit, he will continue on to Korea to inspect Naval activities in the forward area and observe operations of ships of the U. S. Seventh Fleet. He will return to Washington on 1 Dec., by way of the Aleutians and Alaska.

Accompanying Mr. Matthews are his Naval Aide, Capt. H. B. Temple, and his Marine Corps Aide, Col. R. W. Hayward.

Carrier Command

Capt. J. C. Alderman arrived recently on the USS Badoeng Strait, landing by helicopter, to relieve Capt. A. W. McKechnie as commanding officer of the flag ship of Rear Adm. R. W. Ruble's "Jeep" Carrier Task Group that has been in action since early August in Korea. Prior to his new assignment, Captain Alderman was chief staff officer to Commander Fleet Air Guam.

Captain McKechnie will go to Washington, D. C., as aide to the Secretary of Navy for Air.

Navy Football

Navy was handed its worst defeat of the season in Baltimore last Saturday when it lost to Tulane, 27-0.

The powerful Tulane line prevented Navy from going beyond its own 38-yard line until the closing 30 seconds of the first half when Zastrow passed to Vines who carried the ball 52 yards to the Tulane 42.

For the most part, however, Zastrow's passing attempts were in vain. He completed only four out of 23. Three other passes thrown by Mike Sorrentino and Bob Cameron were also incomplete.

One Zastrow pass, intended for Ballyinger, was intercepted by Tulane fullback Bobby Jones who ran it 82 yards up the sidelines for a touchdown. The Green Wave scored one touchdown in each period, but failed to make good the first conversion.

Today, Navy plays Columbia at New York, and on 2 Dec., Army at Philadelphia.

Navy Cancels Exams

Written professional examinations for promotion of Naval officers were canceled this week "until further notice."

A Navy spokesman said that the exams were dispensed with "because of the international situation." He pointed out that "continuous operation of ships, day and night, affords officers little time to prepare for, or take the examinations."

In the future, all officers will be examined on their record, unless they object to such procedure, the Navy said. In cases where a Naval Examining Board finds an officer's record inconclusive, the Board may request further examination or require the officer to personally appear before the Board.

It was also pointed out that officers who are now scheduled for reexamination or delayed examination will be required to complete such exams as previously scheduled.

Medical Selection Board

The Navy selection board now meeting to choose officers of the Medical Department for promotion to commander is composed of Rear Adm. C. A. Broaddus; Captains C. G. Hines, M. S. Mathis, D. W. Lyon, C. G. Clegg, B. E. Bradley, T. W. McDaniel, Jr., and Lt. C. R. Wannemacher, Recorder.

Marine Selection Boards

A Marine Corps board to select officers for promotion to the rank of colonel is expected to complete its deliberations this week and report to the Navy Secretary about 20 Nov.

Approval of the selections will probably not be made until the return of Secretary Matthews from his Far Eastern trip, expected about 2 Dec.

The last board to meet this year will be convened at Marine Corps Headquarters on 30 Nov., to select majors for promotion to lieutenant colonel. The remainder of the boards will be convened sometime after 1 Jan., when the Marine Corps has an accurate account of personnel on active duty.

Marine Women Uniform

A new evening dress uniform for Marine women officers was introduced last week at Marine Corps birthday festivities in Washington, D. C., by Col. Katherine A. Towle, Director of the Women Marines.

Patterned after the full-dress uniform of the men, the ensemble modeled by Colonel Towle was approved by the Secretary of the Navy on 9 Nov. It will be worn by all women officers at state and diplomatic occasions and other functions where evening dress attire would be required. The uniform was designed by Mainbocher.

The uniform consists of a midnight blue mess jacket with a straight formal skirt slightly flared at the hem, over a tailored blouse of white silk—trrimmed at the waist with a scarlet silk cummerbund. The jacket, which bears twelve gilt buttons, six on each side, is worn open. Its scarlet rolled collar is adorned with gold and silver bullion embroidery in the form of oak leaves and acorns, as are the cuffs of the sleeves.

A broad, square-tipped tie is worn at the neck, held with a silver tie-ring bearing the Marine Corps officers' dress ornament.

Rank insignia is embroidered on the shoulder tabs. Also in silver and gold bullion are small replicas of the Marine insignia on the collar points. The headpiece is a tiara of scarlet wool, embroidered with oak leaves and acorns.</

WHEN the talk turns to automobile engines, the man who calls this bonny beauty his own can take over the conversation.

He can tell you of eager-beaver power, alert and nimble on take-off, tirelessly willing at cruising speed.

He can expand on the hushed and silken smoothness of an engine that pours out its horsepower with the silent swoop of a Swiss on skis.

He can quote you figures on miles-per-gallon that are hard to beat, even in the "small-car" field.

And—if his mind runs to things mechanical—he can proudly assert that this Buick's power plant possesses a combination of engineering features found in no other car in the world.

First of all—every Buick ever built has had a valve-in-head engine—a design which admittedly gets more power from every drop of fuel. And, believing in valve-in-head from the beginning, Buick engineers have made the most of their advantage.

Next—every Buick engine today is a Fireball—which means that each incoming charge of fuel is wrapped up in a miniature cyclone of power before it sparks into action.

Add to this still another Buick feature. Every engine is micropoise-balanced after assembly to catch and eliminate any trace of roughness before the engine goes in a car.

Still another exclusive, adding to smoothness, is Buick's special way of cradling the motor, known as Hi-Poise mounting.

Then—to give you a power delivery that is beyond compare—Buick engineers perfected the Dynaflow Drive.*

Is it any wonder that the 1950 demand for Buicks is setting an all-time record high?

Your Buick dealer invites you to find out what you've been missing. Better make it a point to see him—the sooner, the better. How about tomorrow?

AF Medical Support

The expanding use of air evacuation of military patients promises to have a far-reaching effect on activities of the Air Force Medical Service Corps. Col. Philip G. Fleetwood of the Hospitalization and Evacuation Division of the Office of the Air Force Surgeon General declared last week.

Addressing the annual meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons in New York City, Colonel Fleetwood said also that new concepts of medical support are required to meet the needs of highly mobile air units. He noted that a bomb group or larger force may in a matter of days be moved halfway around the world and be required to go into operation immediately. "This factor," he said, "is causing a revamping of many previously accepted methods of medical support."

Colonel Fleetwood described the rigorous qualifications required for Medical Service Corps personnel and related that whereas there is a present authorization for 325 Regular officers, there are but 198 on active duty at the present time.

"Since our Corps is numerically small," Colonel Fleetwood added, "we are placing great emphasis on the quality of our members. This policy causes some initial delay in filling our authorized vacancies but we feel it will pay dividends in the long run."

FEAF Officer Cited

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Commanding General of the U. S. Far East Air Forces, has awarded the Legion of Merit to Col. Wiley D. Ganey, Deputy for Operations of the FEAF Bomber Command, for "exceptionally meritorious service in helping to organize strategic bombing operations in Korea." The award is Colonel Ganey's second Legion of Merit; it was made in General Stratemeyer's headquarters.

U. S. AIR FORCE*Major AF Reorganization

Effective 1 Dec., the Air Force will reorganize its Continental Air Command, dividing that organization into three major commands.

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, has announced the following action:

Tactical Air Command, previously an operational headquarters under ConAC, will become a major command and maintain its headquarters at Langley AFB, Va.

An Air Defense Command will be established with headquarters temporarily located at Mitchel AFB. Early in 1951, the ADC will move to Ent AFB, Colo.

The Continental Air Command, which has its headquarters at Mitchel AFB, N. Y., will remain as one of the three commands and retain its responsibilities for the administration and training of the USAF civilian components.

The major organizational changes required by current plans for Air Force and Army expansion, will provide for the most effective employment of tactical support and air defense units in the growing USAF structure and enable increased emphasis to be placed upon the administration and training of the Air Force reserve components.

Areas of responsibility have been defined for the three commands.

Tactical Air Command will have as its primary mission the development and training of tactical support aviation in conjunction with Army Field Forces; Air Defense Command will be responsible for the air defense of the United States, and ConAC will retain its present responsibilities pertinent to the civilian components of the Air Force.

As previously announced, Tactical Air Command will be commanded by Lt. Gen. John K. Cannon upon his return from his post as Commanding General of U. S. Air Forces in Europe. Until that time, it will be commanded by Maj. Gen. W. R. Wolfenbarger.

TAC will retain control of the bases and units now assigned to it. Among these units are the four fighter-bomber groups and one tactical reconnaissance group of the Air National Guard recently recalled to Federal service and two Air Reserve troop carrier groups now on active duty.

Air Defense Command will be commanded by Lt. Gen. Ennis C. Whitehead who will be reassigned from his present post as commanding general of ConAC.

Headquarters for the Continental Air Command will remain at Mitchel AFB. Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale, now commanding the First Air Force at Mitchel AFB, will be assigned as commanding general of ConAC.

AF Decelerator Tests

The Air Force during the past three years has conducted more than 200 tests in its human decelerator project at Edwards AFB, Muroc, Calif., in order to obtain data regarding the force a human body can sustain and protective devices and procedures which would cut down injuries and fatalities as a result of bally landings, ditchings and crashes of aircraft.

Reporting to the annual meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons in New York City last week, Maj. John Stapp of Edwards AFB told how a 1500-pound rocket propelled sled is accelerated along a 2000-foot precision track and then is brought to a jarring stop.

He said that in tests made with an anthropometric dummy full stops in the jaws of 45 sets of friction brakes within a 50-foot area have been accomplished with a velocity change from 177 miles an hour to zero in 22 feet.

A total of 64 tests have been made with human subjects.

New AF Bases

The Air Force this week took over the Sampson, N. Y., Naval Station for use as an indoctrination center and said simultaneously that the Presque Isle Air Base in Maine would be reopened 1 Jan.

The huge Sampson facility was used as a Naval "boot camp" during World War II. It is expected that rehabilitation of the base will require from 60 to 90 days.

Col. Frederick W. Ott headed an Air Force installation survey team which has inspected the Sampson base and he is expected to be named the first commanding officer.

Promotion Policy

The Air Force on 15 Nov. announced the lifting of the 5 Aug. suspension of all USAF Reserve airmen promotions. USAF also authorized promotion of Reserve second lieutenants to first lieutenants.

The airmen promotions to all grades will be subject to unit vacancies. Each airman being considered for reserve promotion must be qualified by skill for the higher grade. The airmen promotions policy is an interim measure. The entire program is still under study and final plans will be announced.

The promotions of second lieutenants to the next grade only may be accomplished under existing regulations.

This promotion policy does not affect active duty grades or ranks.

Given Commerce Post

Mr. Clarence H. Osthagen, who has been Deputy for Personnel Management to the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force from 1 Aug. 1948, this week was named to be Administrative Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

Mr. Osthagen went on active military duty as a captain in Nov. 1942 and was promoted to the rank of colonel by Aug. 1945. He returned to inactive status in the Air Force Reserve as a colonel in April 1946.

Dependent Travel

Air Force officials said this week that dependents may now travel to the Philippines, Guam and Okinawa subject to availability of housing facilities and shipping space. Travel to Japan remains suspended.

Certify Medical Officer

Official notice of his elevation to membership on the American Board of Preventive Medicine and Public Health was received recently by Maj. Harold V. Ellingson of the School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph AFB, Tex.

The certificate of membership was issued after he had successfully completed a highly professional examination held in St. Louis on 28 Oct. At the School of Aviation Medicine he is Chief of the Department of Global Preventive Medicine.

Major Ellingson is an authority on many of the lesser known maladies of the world, and from 1946 to 1948 was laboratory consultant for the XXIV Corps and chief of the laboratory service for the 34th General Hospital in Korea. Aside from now being a member of the American Board of Preventive Medicine and Public Health, he is also a member of the Society of American Bacteriologists, the American Public Health Association, the Aero Medical Association, the Wisconsin State Medical Society and is a Fellow of the American Medical Association. He holds a B.S. degree in bacteriology from Johns Hopkins University, and M.D. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Wisconsin. He is also a rated flight surgeon.

Record Transport Flight

On its third regular freight haul for the Air Force last week the XC-99, world's largest operational airplane, smashed two more international records by carrying 85,000 pounds of cargo nonstop across the continent. Maj. Gen. Clements McMullen, commanding Kelly AFB, near San Antonio, Tex., announced the record-breaking flight after the huge plane's return to its home port.

The hop from Sacramento, Calif., to Albany, Ga., covered 2,200 air miles with the heaviest payload ever ferried by a plane from coast to coast. The XC-99 on earlier flights had already cracked 21 records for cargo carried various distances at different speeds and altitudes. On one of these trips the mammoth sky freighter hauled more than 100,000 pounds of aircraft parts.

Altogether, on her three round-trip missions from Kelly to other outlying bases, the XC-99 has carried a total of 520,000 ton-miles of cargo. The flights are being scheduled under an evaluation program that will go on for six months, while the Air Force determines how much the XC-99 will transport under a variety of operating conditions.

So far the Convair giant has confined its loads to high-priority materials which are too bulky or too heavy for ordinary air transportation. The need for these materials is so urgent that the Air Force has postponed for the time being its first test of the XC-99 as a troop transport.

The big plane was designed to carry personnel as well as freight. It has a passenger capacity of 400 fully equipped—the equivalent of two airborne companies ready for battle. As an ambulance plane, on the return flight from a war theatre, it can bring back 305 litter patients and 10 hospital attendants, along with its normal crew of 11. According to Col. Theodore W. Tucker, pilot of the XC-99 and the officer in charge of the program, the plane's performance as a cargo carrier has been an unqualified success. General McMullen, who has himself flown the 99, speaks highly of its operating efficiency.

"For shipping heavy items such as aircraft engines, which must be forwarded without delay to distant bases, the XC-99 is the most effective form of transport available," General McMullen said recently. "The global freighter, like its sister ship, the B-36 strategic bomber, is proving a welcome addition to the Air Force arsenal."

Returns to Air Base

After a 33-year absence, Frank R. Anderson has returned to Selfridge AFB, Mich., as a Red Cross executive. He was an "Army brat" at Selfridge in 1917 when his father, 1st Lt. Frank C. Anderson, was the base's first flight surgeon, and Carl A. Spaatz, then a captain, commanded the base.

NAVY BONE BANK

The Navy has one of the few organized bone banks of the United States at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md.

Casualties in Korea

Battle casualties in Korea reported to next of kin reached a total of 28,881 as of 10 Nov., of which 24,989 were Army, 311 Navy, 3375 Marine Corps and 206 Air Force, the Department of Defense announced this week.

Of the 4798 total deaths, 4049 were Army, 49 Navy, 627 Marine Corps and 73 Air Force.

With the onset of cold weather, the number of non-battle casualties, particularly those suffering from frozen feet, is certain to rise considerably. Undoubtedly, despite precautionary measures, the incidence of respiratory disease will also rise markedly.

The following casualties were among those released this week:

Reports from Korea tell of far-ranging carrier-based Skyraiders supporting hard-pressed UN troops as they fought their way through the mountains and plains of that battle-scarred country.

Fleets of Douglas AD Skyraiders provided such tactical support with night attacks and by dive-bombing strategic targets.

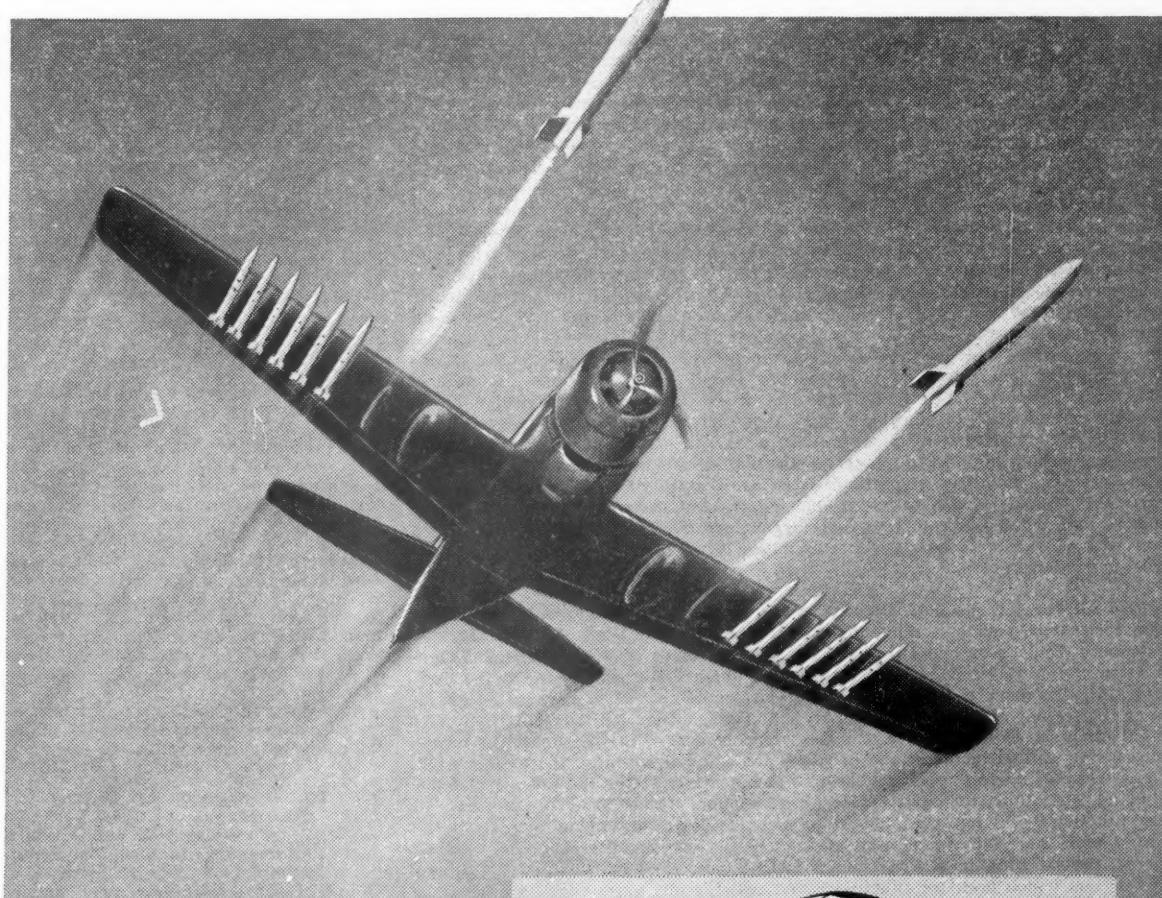

Thus the Navy teamed up with the Air Force and the Army to achieve success in this tough fight.

The Skyraider, like its historic predecessor, the SBD Dauntless, has proved its top performance and dependability under all operating conditions. And true to its tradition of building ever finer aircraft, Douglas has already completed the swift, deadly A2D Skyshark — world's most advanced turbo-prop attack bomber.

Shelve the Surgeons General? When the late Secretary of Defense, James Forrestal, appointed the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee in December of 1948, it consisted of nine civilian leaders of the medical profession, the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy, and the Air Surgeon. On 13 May 1949, when Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson announced the establishment of a Medical Services Division in his office, the official announcement said the action was taken on recommendation of his Medical Advisory Committee "which is composed of 11 civilian physicians and dentists, the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy, and The Air Surgeon." This announcement, then, carried the implication that the new office and its head, the Director of Medical Services, had the approval of the legally responsible heads of the military Medical Departments. However, it now appears that the Surgeons General of the Army, Navy, and Air Force had been removed from the Committee before that step was taken. The currently published roster of the members of the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee carries the names of 12 civilians distinguished and outstanding in their professions, but does not include the names of the three military Surgeons General. In response to a formal inquiry from THE JOURNAL, the Department explained this week that the present membership dates from a directive issued by Secretary Johnson on 30 April 1949 and that the official announcement of 13 May 1949 was in error in including them among the members. No explanation was forthcoming as to why the ranking experts on military medicine were dropped from the top committee on military medicine nor as to why the move was kept so secret. It is a matter of record that the subsequent closing of large service hospitals (a number of which had to be reopened at considerable expense) was accomplished without consulting the Surgeons General. It is also evident that the long standing program of providing medical care for families of military personnel is in jeopardy as a result of the policies flowing from the Committee and the OSD Medical Director. Secretary of the Army Pace has officially reported the uncertainty as to dependent care as "distinctly detrimental" to morale. Deputy Secretary of Defense Lovett is now engaged in a restudy of this entire set-up with a view to making recommendations to Secretary Marshall and also to answering the inquiry of the Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Representative Vinson, as to why the military medical departments should be singled out by placing them under an "overseer." We feel confident that when the complete facts are before Secretary Marshall corrective action will be taken, including the elimination of the existing uncertainty with respect to dependent care.

New Air Force Commands. Division of the Continental Air Command into three major commands, each reporting directly to the Chief of Staff, General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, is a natural and logical step in the growth of the Air Force. Transformation of the Tactical Air Command from a subordinate component of the Continental Air Command to a new top-level major command will accelerate the utilization of the lessons of the Korean war in both material and training doctrines. The current plans for both Air Force and Army expansion give the Air Force the means to do this as well as increases the necessity for doing it speedily. Increasing international tension made imperative the new independent status for the Air Defense Command. Meantime, the Continental Air Command, which formerly embraced all these functions, will now be able to concentrate its attention on increasing the training and operational readiness of the reserve components including the Air Reserve, the Air National Guard, the Air R.O.T.C., and the Civil Air Patrol. The new organization, which becomes effective 1 Dec., will permit more effective use of the increasing strength in men and planes.

Uniforms. Recurrent rumors in the daily press that changes in various uniforms are being studied, are pending, or may be made in the future, should be stopped by a positive statement from the Department. Against such a background of uncertainty officers don't know where they stand, sartorially speaking. If their outfit is reasonably new they fear they may be put to unnecessary expense to buy a different type uniform. If they need a new uniform they are reluctant to buy now for fear changes may be ordered. There are much more important morale factors than new uniforms that should be tended to—income tax relief, certainty with respect to dependent care, combat pay, etc.

Letters intended for publication should be accompanied by the name and address of the writer as evidence of good faith. If the writer desires to omit his name when the letter is published, he should so state. THE JOURNAL may find it necessary to use only extracts from longer letters.

Navy Junior Officers

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

When is the Navy Department going to give junior officers a break on promotions? Recently 822 LCDR's were selected for promotion to the grade of Commander, many from the class of 1941. These officers can expect to be promoted in 1951 after only ten years commissioned service. The normal term of service listed in Public Law 381 is eighteen years.

Officers commissioned early in 1944, three years their juniors, are still sweating out promotions to Lieutenant. In other words, three years commissioned service represents the difference between being a Commander or a Lieutenant.

It is said that one of the reasons for this slowness is that a large number of reserve lieutenants have been called to active duty since 25 June. If officers of the grade of Lieutenant are needed, why not promote those on the selection list of the Regular Navy? Officers on that list have five years or more in grade, on sea duty, and had to pass a stiff promotion exam to determine their professional fitness.

About two years ago, spokesmen for the Navy Department voiced great concern over the large number of junior officers resigning from the service. Unless the present promotion policy is changed, or at least explained, the same situation will arise again when the current emergency is over.

Mustang.

Nurses' Promotion

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I too fail to see why we in the Regular Army, who have been in grade a long time, should wait for the Army to promote Reserves with less time in grade because they are above us on the promotion list due to age rather than date of rank. It does not follow that added age will assure superior performance or leadership.

We have a new integration program in progress to admit Army Nurses who were under 35 when they entered service for World War II but were over 35 when the 1947 bill was passed, so I suppose promotion lists will be realigned and these older girls too will be placed above us on the list because they exceed us in age.

As far as I can see it is a hopeless case for us who are at present in our middle thirties. What price youth!

Seek Information on Lt. Barrick

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I hope that through your publication I might find some bit of information about my husband, 2d Lt. George M. Barrick, Jr., 057513. He has been missing in action since 12 July in Korea. He was attached to Hqs. Co. 21st Inf., 3d Bn., 24th Division, as A&P Platoon leader.

If any of your readers happen to know anything about my husband I would like to have them write to me. I thought perhaps there might be someone in his group who might have returned who knew something of what happened to Lt. Barrick.

In The Journal

One Year Ago

The Bureau of the Budget proposal to eliminate dependent care for Armed Forces personnel, disclosed in last week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, this week evoked strong protest from the Department of Defense Personnel Policy Board, Congressional leaders and Service officials cognizant with the serious effect of such action on military morale.

10 Years Ago

The successful British attacks upon units of the Italian Fleet at Taranto, and upon an Italian convoy in the Straits of Otranto, the unexpectedly heroic resistance of the Greeks, the raiding operations of a German pocket battleship in mid-Atlantic, the heavy losses of British and neutral shipping, and the seizure by the de Gaulle Forces of the western Atlantic port of French Equatorial Africa, are all new blocks which the developments of the week inserted into the mosaic of the war.

25 Years Ago

The Infantry Board is preparing to subject the new model Garand and Thompson semi-automatic rifles to an extensive field test. These two pieces of ordnance materiel were given a preliminary field test some time ago, and found satisfactory from a number of standpoints. The approaching tests, it is pointed out by officers in the War Department are to determine their suitability for rough work in the field.

50 Years Ago

Recommendations which, if adopted, will have a far-reaching effect upon the organization and equipment of the Artillery arm of the service have been made to the Secretary of War by officers interested in seeing this country supplied with the most modern guns for sea-coast defense. For many years it has been clearly seen by the most advanced military men in our Army that the present system for equipping coast fortifications was erroneous.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—Interest in the appearance of Chinese Communist emissaries before the Security Council of the United Nations is heightened by the arrogance with which Red China rejected any suggestion that the delegates come to Lake Success to explain or defend Red Chinese aggression in Korea. On the contrary Foreign Minister Chou En Lai has informed Secretary-General Trygve Lie that the Chinese delegation comes for the sole purpose of charging the United States with the unprovoked and illegal invasion of Formosa and Korea.

The United Nations, at the insistence of Russia, a month ago invited Red China to send representatives to Lake Success to support its charges that the United States was the aggressor in Formosa, in providing a naval patrol to prevent the invasion of the island by the Chinese Reds. Last week the Security Council invited the Chinese Communists to answer the charge of General Douglas MacArthur that regular Chinese troops of the Red army had crossed into Korea from Manchuria and had attacked United Nations troops. The Red Chinese have accepted the first invitation, but haughtily rejected the second.

While officially declining to defend the presence of Chinese troops in Korea the government-controlled Peiping radio makes the amazing explanation that the Chinese now fighting our troops in Korea are volunteer formations, despite overwhelming proof to the contrary. However, this contention may indicate that the Reds are keeping a way open for the withdrawal of their forces without loss of face, a prime consideration in Oriental psychology.

At Lake Success diplomats are prepared to assure the Chinese delegation that United Nations forces will not invade Manchuria, that no non-Communist nation represented in the Korean conflict has any designs on Chinese or Korean territory, that there will be no interference with distribution of Korean-generated electric power to Manchuria, and that an independent, united Korea will present no threat to China. If these assurances are accepted by Red China the Communist aggression in Korea should end; if not, the danger of a new world conflict will be very real.

Tibet has appealed to the United Nations to save it from invasion by Communist China. The long message from the government of the isolated, mountain theocracy recounts the history of Chinese-Tibetan relations, and vigorously rejects the claim that China has ever had a legal right to control Tibet. There is small prospect that the appeal will do more than arouse the sympathy of the United Nations. Almost insurmountable terrain difficulties preclude the dispatch of military aid.

Furthermore Chinese claims to a somewhat loose sovereignty over Tibet have been more or less accepted by most nations over the years. The present situation in Tibet is somewhat obscure. Red Chinese troops are known to have crossed the border and to be moving on Lhasa despite extremely adverse weather conditions in the high mountain passes. Rumors that Communist sympathizers have seized control in Lhasa are without confirmation.

While Communism in Asia is under consideration at Lake Success, statesmen in Washington are turning their attention to further measures to save western Europe from the Red menace. As one step in this direction former Army Secretary Gordon Gray, who has been making a special study of the subject, has proposed an extension of the 1952 deadline for Marshall Plan aid.

This was among the recommendations made by Mr. Gray in a report to the President after a detailed survey of current and future economic requirements of Marshall Plan countries. In releasing the report the President did not indicate his approval of the findings, but accepted them as a basis for study by Governmental agencies engaged in foreign aid.

The Gray report proposes continuance of Marshall Plan aid for three or four years; intensified assistance to undeveloped areas at a cost of more than a billion a year; repeal of the 1933 act discriminating against imported goods in Government purchases, and a change of policy to permit proceeds of U. S. Government foreign loans to be spent outside as well as within this country; further tariff reductions and extension of the reciprocal Trade Agreements Act which expires next year; elimination of certain import quotas and embargoes; limitation of American merchant marine subsidies to enlarge competitive opportunities for foreign shipping; international co-operation in channeling scarce materials so as to contribute to the common defense; and centralization in one agency of all American foreign economic aid programs. Several of Mr. Gray's recommendations are certain to encounter stiff Congressional opposition.

Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin announced in Commons this week that Great Britain will reject the Russian proposal for a four-power conference on a German peace treaty and the unification of Germany. Undoubtedly parallel action will be taken by the United States and France. The Soviet Union suggested a joint declaration against remilitarization of Germany to prevent Germany from "being dragged into any aggressive plans"; removal of hindrances to peaceful German economy, with war plants ruled out; conclusion of a peace treaty, unifying Germany, and providing for withdrawal of all occupation forces within one year; and creation of an all-German Constitutional Council to set up a single government.

Mr. Bevin pointed out that Russia had refused to disband the heavily armed quasi-military police organization it had set up in East Germany, and that this and other violations of the Potsdam agreement suggest that four-power discussions at this time could have little purpose.

Surgeons General Dropped From Committee—Although the Department of Defense has never made any public announcement—in fact was itself confused with regard to the timing of the action—the three Surgeons General have been dropped from membership on the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee. The significance of the elimination of the top medical officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force from this Committee is seen in the fact that the group, headed by Mr. Charles P. Proctor of New York City, advises the Secretary of Defense "on questions which affect the Armed Services as a whole in the fields of medicine and the allied professions." It was on the recommendation of this Committee that the Office of Medical Services, now headed by Dr. Richard L. Melling, was created at the Department of Defense level.

Appointment late in 1948 by Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal, the Committee originally included nine civilian leaders of the medical profession and the Surgeons General of the Army, Navy, and Air Force. At that time, the Air Force was represented by the Air Surgeon, since a separate Air Force Medical Service was not established until May of last year.

A Department of Defense press release dated 13 May 1949, which announced the establishment of the Medical Services Division within the Office of the Secretary of Defense, said the action was taken on recommendation of the Medical Advisory Committee, "which is composed of 11 civilian physicians and dentists, the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy and the Air Surgeon."

But an inquiry from THE JOURNAL regarding the date and circumstances relating to the dropping of the three military medical officers from the Committee has brought from the Department a response that this action was taken prior to 13 May. Following is the text of the question and answer:

Q. "When the membership of the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee was originally announced it included the three Surgeons General—Army, Navy and Air Force. The present published list of members does not now include these officers. When were they dropped and what were the circumstances and reasons?"

The Department's answer: "The Committee was named in December 1948 and held its first meeting in January 1949. In a Secretary of Defense directive dated April 30 1949 the Committee was reconstituted to provide that effective May 2 1949 the membership should consist of a civilian chairman and such other members from the medical and allied professions as should be named by the Secretary of Defense. The present membership dates from the completion of the Committee at that time. Additional data may be available from Committee Chairman, Mr. Cooper, whose offices are in New York City."

Since the Committee at no time was under chairmanship of a military medical officer, the stipulation that a civilian should be chairman is seen as rather meaningless. As regards the membership of the Surgeons General it is not clear whether their relief was initiated by the Secretary of Defense or by the other members of the Committee.

In any event, the absence of the top military medical officers from the Committee is seen as a major handicap to maximum effectiveness of this group in its important responsibilities, since the Surgeons General are, of course, the outstanding authorities on military medicine. Also, the secrecy which surrounded their removal from the Committee certainly must be a blow to the morale of the military medical services.

It may very well be that the new Assistant Secretary of Defense, Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, will take this matter under study as one of her initial projects in supervising manpower and personnel policy actions within the Department of Defense.

Army Rations Problem—Army officials were reported this week to be studying methods to relieve the current situation in which officers in Korea, even though they may be eating combat rations in front-line foxholes, are paying more for their meals than are officers in the United States. Because of increased transportation costs, officers overseas are charged 40 cents per meal, while those in the Zone of Interior pay 35 cents.

Selection of World War II Unknown—Selection and entombment of the World War II Unknown has been postponed indefinitely, the Department of Defense announced on 9 Nov. The World War II Unknown was to have been selected at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on 26 May 1951. Entombment in Arlington National Cemetery had been scheduled for next 30 May.

Plans for the ceremonies will be scheduled at some future date. Proceeding with arrangements for paying homage to the Unknown was not considered appropriate at the present time.

Air Force Dental Service—Maj. Gen. George R. Kennebeck, Chief of the Dental Division, recently represented the Air Force as Alternate Delegate at the annual convention of the American Dental Association in Atlantic City, N. J. and Lt. Col. Jack M. Messner, Dental Surgeon, Headquarters Command, Bolling Air Force Base, Washington, D. C., was the Air Force Delegate to the convention.

Other Air Force Dental Corps officers who attended the convention were: Col. Henry J. Tvrdy, Dental Surgeon, Air Materiel Command, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio; Lt. Col. Lee M. Lightner, Dental Surgeon, Air Training Command, Scott AFB, Ill.; Lt. Col. Kenneth R. Elwell, Dental Surgeon, Strategic Air Command, Offutt AFB, Nebr.; Lt. Col. Sydney G. Gordon, Dental Surgeon, Continental Air Command, Mitchel AFB, N. Y.; and Capt. Douglas C. Wendt, Dental Surgeon, Military Air Transport Service, Washington National Airport, Washington, D. C.

Young DFC Recipient—A member of the 19th Infantry Regiment of the 24th Infantry Division, PFC. Charles L. Schanholtz, 17, has become one of the youngest men ever to win the Distinguished Service Cross. He received the award for heroic action during a Kum River battle early in the Korean war.

Quartermaster Corps—Brig. Gen. Donald S. McConaughy, Commanding General of Sharpe General Depot, Calif., will be transferred to San Antonio General Depot as Commanding General effective 21 Nov. and Col. Thomas R. Howard will be transferred 15 Dec. from San Antonio General Depot as Commanding Officer to Sharpe General Depot as Commanding Officer.

Lt. Col. Townsend C. Anderson, Personnel and Training Division, Office of The Quartermaster General was transferred 1 Nov. to Office Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2. Lt. Col. John O. Weaver will be reassigned in December from the Quartermaster Center, Fort Lee, Va. to the Army General School, Fort Riley, Kans. for duty with Staff & Faculty as Chief, Psychological Warfare Department.

Army Chaplains—Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Edward W. Eanes, Chief of the Assignment Branch, Military Personnel Division, Office, Chief of Army Chaplains, is on a twelve-day tour during which he will visit Supervisory Chaplains of the Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Armies. Representing the Office, Chief of Chaplains, Chaplain Eanes will confer with the various Army chaplains concerning their personnel needs.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Joel M. Wareing, Military Personnel Division, Office, Chief of Chaplains, has returned to headquarters in The Pentagon after representing the Office, Chief of Chaplains at an Officers Reserve Corps Conference of the Army Field Forces, at Fort Monroe, Va., 9-10 Nov.

The Chief of Army Chaplains, Maj. Gen. Roy H. Parker on 13 Nov., presented to the library of William Jewell College, Liberty, Missouri, a copy of the Bible which had been removed from a Jewish institution in Germany prior to the outbreak of World War II and miraculously saved from destruction at the hands of the Nazis. The Bible had been sent to Chaplain Parker by Chaplain (Lt. Col. Henry Tavel, now on duty in Germany.

Last AF Enlisted Command Pilot—Last week, officials at McClellan AFB, Calif., reported that no trace had yet been found of a C-47 plane piloted by M/Sgt. Thomas W. Rafferty, missing en route from Hill AFB, Utah, since 26 Oct. Sergeant Rafferty is said to be the last enlisted pilot in the Air Force wearing command pilot's wings.

Co-pilot of the missing craft was 1st Lt. Richard N. Luse and T/Sgt. William A. Larsen was crew chief. An enlisted reservist, Pfc. Dan L. Young, was also aboard the ill-fated plane.

Sergeant Rafferty has a record of more than 8,000 flying hours and in 1945 established a record when he flew a Constellation from Burbank, Calif., to New York and return in an elapsed time of 20 hours and 58 minutes. He has been prominent in developmental work on pressurized airplane cabins for use in high altitude flights.

Army Nurse Corps—Six Army nurses now on duty at Walter Reed Army Hospital have been transferred to the 329th Hospital Train unit now receiving training at Army Medical Center. They include: Maj. Lubov Wilcha, chief nurse of the train, Capt. Gladys O. Neirby, 1st Lts. Josephine C. Mulligan and Kathleen E. Quigley, and 2d Lts. Elisa Camacho-Hernandez and Helen I. Gallick.

U. N. Ship "Launched"—A unique launching ceremony was held recently at Wonsan, Korea, where MS-41, small minesweeper found badly damaged at the navy yard, was unofficially named the UNS (United Nations Ship) Guinea Pig and was refloated in the harbor. Instead of the usual champagne, a jug of Korean cherry wine was used in the launching ceremony.

The minesweeper was built originally by the Japanese and was used in World War II. Turned over to the South Korean Navy after the war, the vessel was delivered to the North Koreans by a mutinous crew which, swayed by propaganda, killed their captain. The minesweeper was hit by a rocket and set afire during an air raid and was abandoned by the retreating Red forces.

AF Medical Service—Dr. Walter M. Boothby, Professor Emeritus of the Mayo Foundation, has joined the professional staff of the School of Aviation Medicine as Research Advisor, Brig. Gen. Otis O. Benson, Jr., school commandant, has announced at Randolph AFB, Tex. Dr. Boothby arrived at the school from Sweden where for the past two years he has been advisor on research in aviation medicine and physiology to the Swedish Aviation Medicine Council at the University of Lund. During his two years abroad he also appeared as guest lecturer at the Universities of Aarhus, in Denmark, and Oxford and Cambridge in England. He was just completing his two-year tour at the University of Lund when General Benson invited him to the School of Aviation Medicine as Research Advisor.

Russia Building Fleet—A report from England this week gave increased emphasis to reports that Russia is building up her fleet.

An unofficial survey, "Brassey's 1950 Annual" reported that the USSR has recently completed two 35,000-ton battleships, one or two aircraft carriers, plans to build two more battleships, and is increasing her submarine strength to 1,000 by the end of 1951.

The 65-year old publication noted that "There is an impression of unreality about this Russian naval expansion, if only because it seems to be based on a faulty conception of modern naval requirements." Brassey's also estimated a Russian army of 3,000,000, with trained manpower reserves approaching 13 million by 1954.

Naval Dental Corps—Rear Adm. Alfred W. Chandler, DC, USN, Inspector General, Dental, was elected Second Vice President of the American Dental Association at its recent annual meeting at Atlantic City, N. J.

At the same meeting the Naval Dental Corps exhibit was awarded the Certificate of Honor for having won first prize in the Scientific Exhibit Section out of a total of 40 entries. The material for the exhibit panels was prepared by dental officers of the Naval Dental School and the Naval Medical Research Institute, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md.

Comdr. Daniel Francis Lynch, DCR, USNR (Inactive) of Washington, D. C., was reelected to the Board of Trustees of the American Dental Association as representative from the 4th District. The Fourth District includes the States of Delaware, Maryland, and New Jersey; the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and dental sections of the Army, Navy, Public Health Service and Veterans Administration. Commander Lynch is currently a Reserve Consultant to the Surgeon General of the Navy on matters pertaining to dentistry.

Signal Corps—The following Signal Corps officers have reported for duty in the Office of the Chief Signal Officer: Lt. Cols. Charles F. Hoban and Ralph W. White, Army Pictorial Service Division; Capt. Phillip D. Oyler and First Lt. William E. Albert, Army Communications Service Division.

Army Dental Corps—Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Smith, Special Assistant to The Surgeon General, returned 15 Nov. from a 10-day inspection trip throughout the Fifth Army Area. General Smith visited dental installations at Camp Atterbury, Ind.; Camp McCoy, Wisc.; Fort Custer, Mich.; and Percy Jones Army Hospital, Battle Creek, Mich.

Brig. Gen. Oscar P. Snyder, Director of Dental Activities, Army Medical Center, served as Chairman of a panel discussion on "Commonly Used Filling Materials" at the 57th annual Convention of the Association of Military Surgeons held 10 Nov. at the Hotel Statler, New York City.

North Pole Flights—A new record in Arctic flying was made 14 Nov. when a B-29 Superfortress of the 375th Strategic Reconnaissance Squadron completed the 375th Air Force Weather Flight over the North Pole. The big bomber and its 13-man crew made the nearly 4,000-mile, 15-hour and 55-minute flight as part of a routine weather observation service which has been operating since 1947.

Commanding the B-29 "Lonesome Polecat," on the polar hop were Capt. Edward N. Pollock and 1st Lt. Carl W. Opitz. Honorary Commander for the flight was Rear Adm. Clifton A. F. Sprague, USN, Commander of the Alaskan Sea Frontier.

The North Pole round-trips, operated from the base 26 miles southeast of Fairbanks, have been flown every other day for the past three years. They serve primarily as weather observer flights to record atmosphere conditions between the base just out of Fairbanks and the North Pole.

AF Medical Service Corps—A report on the technique the Air Force is employing in the assignment of Medical Service Corps officers specializing in supply functions was delivered last week before the annual meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons in New York City by Lt. Col. John Luft of the Medical Material Division of the Office of the Air Force Surgeon General. He said the medical material specialist normally begins his career at the base level, after which he becomes eligible for assignment to a medical depot. Then, the officer may be assigned to the Armed Services Medical Procurement Agency, subsequent to which he is qualified for assignment to the Medical Material Division of the Surgeon General's Office in Washington, D. C.

Colonel Luft added that opportunity is given also during the officer's career for student trainee courses with industry, formal training at civilian institutions in the fields of business administration and industrial management, and finally the course at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

Young and Old Of It—The 25th Infantry Division in Korea has a 19-year-old former master sergeant who has been given a battlefield commission as a second lieutenant and another master sergeant—70 years old—who wants to reenlist.

The battlefield commission was awarded M/Sgt. Joseph E. Marlett, a recipient of the Silver Star Medal. He is one of 86 enlisted men of the 25th Infantry Division who have been made second lieutenants as a result of battlefield heroism.

Now in a hospital in Japan after four months of rugged service in Japan is M/Sgt. Joseph Grendell, who celebrated his 70th birthday 21 Oct. while serving as food supervisor with the division's headquarters. He enlisted in the Army first in 1914 and served until 1921, when he began a Civil Service career in food service, retiring from this employment in 1940. Then, at the age of 60, he enlisted in the Army and served throughout World War II at Ft. Belvoir, Va. He had told a recruiting official that he was 37 years of age. Now, he's ready to reenlist for another hitch "if they'll send me back to Nara, Japan."

Leaflet Warfare—It takes a heap of leaflets to fight a modern war. Between 28 June and the end of October, the Psychological Warfare Branch of the Far East Command disseminated 100 million leaflets in Korea, according to a report from Maj. Gen. Charles A. Willoughby, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2.

Most of the leaflets were dropped by airplanes—90 million being delivered by B-29's and C-47's. Another 10 million were delivered by Eighth Army and X Corps by means of Fifth Air Force aircraft, observation planes and artillery and howitzer shells.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery—Rear Adm. Bertram Groesbeck, Jr., MC, USN, Assistant Chief of the Bureau for Aviation and Operational Medicine accompanied by Comdr. Louis R. Gens, MC, USN, Director of Amphibious and Marine Corps Field Medicine Division will visit the newly established Field Medical Service School at the Marine Barracks, Camp Lejeune, N. C. on 20 Nov. The Field Medical Service School was established 1 Oct. to provide training for Medical Department personnel of the Navy in the techniques of field medicine and in basic military subjects. Graduates of this school are normally assigned to units of the Fleet Marine Force.

Re-Interment Rites

Maj. Gen. Orde Charles Wingate, D.S.O., one-time commander of the famous British jungle-fighting "Chindits," and an American Air Force combat crew, two London war correspondents and a British Army medical officer, who were killed together in an air crash in India during World War II, were re-interred together in a single grave at Arlington national cemetery on Friday, 10 Nov., in a simple Catholic-Protestant ceremony.

Parents of three Air Force crewmen and civil and military representatives from the British, Israeli and other embassies, along with American officials and London newsmen, were present at the funeral.

General Wingate, 41, who was the Allied jungle commander in Burma, and his eight companions were killed on 25 Mar., 1944, during the time he was moving his "Chindites," or "Wingate's Raiders," in behind the Japanese positions in Burma in an airborne operation, when a B-25 crashed at Thilon Village in India. The bodies were buried in one grave under a simple cross at the scene of the accident, which is 50 miles northwest of Imphal, India.

The Air Force crew, all members of the air task force of Col. Philip Cochran, were: 1st Lt. Brian F. Hodges, son of Frank Hodges of Franklin Hotel, in Spartanburg, S. C.; 2d Lt. Stephen A. Wanderer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph N. Wanderer of Hamilton, Mont.; T. Sgt. James W. Hickey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Hickey of 1222 Melbrose Ave. in Dallas, Tex.; T. Sgt. ## Caribbean Command evacuation of American nationals from trouble spots; providing aid when disaster strikes in the countries south of the Rio Grande; providing air search and sea rescue to unfortunate vessels and aircraft in distress; supporting State Department policies; and others too numerous to mention.

With the passage of the National Defense Act in 1947, six unified commands were set up throughout the world by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Each of these are commanded by a General or Flag Officer of one of the services who, in turn, commands the three Services located within his area. The Joint Chiefs decided that an Army officer would be the Commander in the Caribbean. The Commander in Chief, Caribbean, makes his official reports to the Joint Chiefs of Staff through his executive agent, the Chief of Staff, U. S. Army.

The structure of Caribbean Command consists of an over-all theater headquarters made up of Army, Navy and Air Force officers and enlisted men in the Headquarters at Quarry Heights. The Headquarters is composed of five directors, with their staffs, serving the Commander in Chief. These directors are Plans and Operations, Intelligence, Logistics, Communications, and the Staff Secretary. The Headquarters also has a special staff agency in the Area Petroleum Office which exercises staff jurisdiction over petroleum matters within the Caribbean Command.

The major components of the Command are: Firstly, the Army component known as U. S. Army Caribbean, presently commanded by Maj. Gen. Ray E. Porter. The Army is divided into two sectors, the Panama and the Antilles Sectors. General Porter assumes a second role as he also exercises command of the Army's Panama Sector. The Commander of the Army's Antilles Sector is Brig. Gen. Edwin S. Sibert. Secondly, the Naval component of the Command is known as the Caribbean Sea Frontier. This component is also divided into two sectors. The top Naval command rests with Rear Adm. Marshall E. Greer, whose headquarters is at San Juan, Puerto Rico. He also commands the Antilles Area of the Caribbean Command and heads the Navy's 10th Naval District. The Navy's Panama Sector of the Caribbean Sea Frontier is headed by Rear Adm. E. W. Hanson who also heads the 15th Naval District in Panama. Lastly, the Air Force component, known as Caribbean Air Command, is headed by Brig. Gen. Emil R. Kiel, with headquarters at Albrook AFB, Canal Zone.

Because of the geographical location of the headquarters at the crossroads of the Western Hemisphere it becomes important as a contact point with the Latin American Republics. The Armed Forces maintain liaison and cooperate with these nations through military missions established in fourteen countries in Latin America. Over 300 Army, Navy and Air Force officers and men are accredited to Latin American missions. They act as advisors and assistants to the leaders of these countries' armed forces. The Navy also has missions in some of the Latin American countries although the Caribbean Command exercises no jurisdiction over them. The Navy missions report directly to the Chief of Naval Operations; however, the 15th Naval District, located within the Command, does furnish certain support to these Naval missions.

Counterparts to the military missions are schools operated by the Army and Air Force. These schools are for Latin American officers and enlisted men. Over three thousand officers and men have studied subjects under the tutelage of United States military personnel, ranging from radio communications to the repair of aircraft engines. These schools serve a double purpose because they train the officers and men from the attending military services in uniform practices and procedures, and bring to the students a common understanding of the Americas. In the school curriculum the students learn of the latest advancements made by their big neighbor to the North, and they also learn of each other's problems.

At various times the Caribbean Command forces have made definite contributions to the strengthening of ties between the United States and countries of Latin America by rendering aid when disaster strikes. On two occasions the Armed Forces have aided earthquake victims in Peru; supplied aid to the fire victims of Tomaco, Colombia, when a fire nearly wiped out the entire city, and also to fire victims of Santa Lucia in the Antilles; assisted flood victims in Trinidad, Bolivia, and in Guatemala; and when the great infantile paralysis epidemic broke out in Chile, iron lungs were sent by air to Santiago to assist the medical profession in saving lives of polio victims. During the flood in Bolivia, American aircraft carried over 50,000 pounds of supplies and evacuated over 3,000 people from the flood area. For this mission each man who took part received the highest award of Bolivia, the Order of the Condor.

These are but some of the many ways Caribbean Command has both served the United States and improved relations with our neighbors to the south. In doing so, it has also trained its organizations to act as a unified team.

As in all U. S. military installations, emphasis is continually placed on training. Of great value to the Army, the Caribbean presents a proving ground and training area for jungle warfare. Members of the Army are continually training under the leadership of an experienced cadre of jungle warfare veterans. Jungle platoons of the Infantry maintain their proficiency by carrying on experiments in jungle living and fighting, in identification of jungle life, and in performing search and rescue missions in the dense undergrowth of the tropics.

Since the opening of the Panama Canal on 15 Aug., 1915, the Armed Forces have been responsible for its defense. No single instance has occurred to slow up traffic through the Canal during two world wars, a credit to the success of the mission. The defense of the Canal has always depended upon the coordinated efforts of the Army, Navy, and later of the Air Force as it came into its own. Of equal importance, insofar as coordination with other forces is concerned, is the mission of defending the United States from attack through the Caribbean.

Thus Caribbean Command, without a great deal of fanfare, is accomplishing a large task in guarding one of the world's great waterways and by protecting the Western Hemisphere from attack in an area where overseas forces of the enemy were so active during World War II. Consequently, soldiers, sailors, airmen and civilians are working together to make this program effective and efficient.

Caribbean Command is truly teamed for defense.

Gen. Bradley's Warning

"Since the Navy is sharing with the United Kingdom, and to some degree France, the naval responsibility for the North Atlantic Ocean, its build-up is internationally important. For not only American citizens but citizens of the whole North Atlantic Treaty Organization are depending on the U. S. Navy. Fortunately, we will be able to program the necessary ships, including an adequate naval air arm for this task.

"As part of the Navy, we are scheduling two full-strength divisions of Marines for the Fleet Marine Force and its naval role. It is unnecessary to point out that we are also counting on these two Marine divisions to serve as a supplement to the ground army whenever such action is necessary.

"Our defense obviously calls for a larger Army than we have ever had before. But this week the Joint Chiefs of Staff are face to face with a difficult problem. If we establish the number of divisions and separate regimental combat teams that we need as a bare minimum, our manpower total for Army, Navy and Air Force comes face to face with manpower shortages. They are not real shortages in the sense that in case of war we could not meet the demands. After all, in 1945 we had 89 divisions and a great Air Force and a great Navy.

"But in peacetime, we will have to maintain, for many years to come, large forces which may cut into the manpower available for industry and production. Obviously, we must strike a sound balance between these demands. If our requirements for immediately available forces exceed those we can properly maintain on continuous active duty, then maybe we should re-study our entire system of reserves so that we can have more trained units immediately available in case we are attacked.

"For example, instead of maintaining all National Guard divisions at 100 per cent officer strength and approximately 50 per cent enlisted strength—with many of these soldiers serving recruit enlistments—perhaps we should maintain some of them at 100 per cent officer strength and 85 to 90 per cent enlisted strength, with every soldier in these divisions having had the benefit of a couple of years of active service. If this were the case, then some National Guard divisions could be available for combat almost immediately.

"Similarly, some of our Reserve units should be brought up to this standard. In addition to their officer personnel, their enlisted men should have all had at least two years' training, and the units should have annual training periods to keep them up to date.

"There was a time when commanders of U. S. forces could look across both oceans and could plan on fielding their first divisions in six months to a year. That is no longer the case, for the manifest intent of communist aggression as shown in Korea has shortened the readiness time for American forces.

"Somehow we must modify our Reserve and National Guard system—ground, air and navy—to meet this new requirement. However, until such time that units of the civilian components are in this improved state of readiness, the American manpower resources may have to be severely taxed to create the active forces we need."

Navy Commissions

The Navy has stopped accepting applications for commissions in the Medical and Dental Corps of the Naval Reserve and in the Dental Corps of the regular Navy from doctors and dentists who are classified "priority one" under the Selective Service Act.

More than enough applications are on hand, the Navy Bureau of Personnel announced, to fill "priority one" quotas allotted to the Navy by Defense Department regulations established under the act.

GMC Defense Projects

General Motors participation in the defense program is outlined to stockholders in the report for the third quarter released this week over the signatures of Mr. C. E. Wilson, President, and Mr. Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., Chairman of the Board.

"General Motors," their report states, "is participating in the stepped-up defense program and stands ready now as in the past to shoulder all tasks the Government may wish it to undertake. Substantial additional assignments are under discussion with the military authorities. Defense production requirements had not affected commercial production as the quarter ended. How future defense needs may affect the supply of rubber, steel and other materials necessary for GM commercial production cannot be foreseen as this report is being written. As the defense program unfolds, however, it is certain to require increasing quantities of such materials."

Under a special heading "Recent Developments in General Motors," the report describes the corporation's defense activities as follows:

Cadillac Undertakes Tank Program

"In August the Cadillac Motor Car Division signed a contract with the United States Army for the production of tanks of completely new and advanced design. Among the more formidable features of the new tanks are increased fire power, high speed and exceptional maneuverability.

The Cadillac contract was the first commitment received by a General Motors division under the expanded defense program. Even prior to August, under authority of a letter of intent, Cadillac had begun preparations for the assignment. As a result, a substantial amount of the work of production planning and organizing for the task had already been done when the contract was signed.

"Cadillac will center its tank manufacture in a Government World War II aircraft plant in Cleveland, Ohio, with top-ranking executives from the Cadillac organization assigned to this important defense work. Most of these men took an important part in Cadillac's tank assignment during World War II. Since the manufacture of tanks will be in a separate plant, it is not expected that this assignment will directly affect production of Cadillac cars.

"In the production of the new tanks, Cadillac will perform all of the major machining operations on the hull and turret in addition to handling the final assembly of the vehicles. Subassemblies, parts and materials will be furnished by other GM divisions and by more than 600 outside suppliers and subcontractors.

Allison Will Build New Tank Transmissions

"Allison Division, a major producer of aircraft engines for the United States Air Force and Navy, is also an important supplier of transmissions for military as well as civilian vehicles.

INDUSTRY * FINANCE * MARITIME

"During the quarter Allison received a contract from the Army to produce a new, hydraulically-controlled, torque-converter type transmission for installation in the new tanks to be produced by Cadillac. The new transmission also will be used in all types of tracklaying military vehicles. It is similar to the one Allison has been building for the M-46 (General Patton) tank which it will continue to produce at an accelerated rate.

"Since the end of World War II Allison has devoted itself primarily to designing and producing gas turbine engines (turbo-jets and turbo-props). Besides improving fuel economy, and over-all performance, the Division has succeeded in reducing production costs substantially, thus achieving important savings for the Government. These engines have proved their worth in combat aircraft in Korea.

"Recently a derivation of Allison's Navy-sponsored turbo-prop was developed for use in commercial aircraft. Two of these redesigned engines are now being installed in a commercial airliner which will shortly undergo development testing.

Detroit Diesel Will Supply Engine Generator Sets

"The Detroit Diesel Engine Division received a defense assignment during the quarter under which it will supply a specially designed gasoline engine generator set for various military applications including the new tank to be produced by Cadillac. This Division makes Diesel engines for trucks, coaches, tractors, boats and for road-building, oil well and other industrial equipment.

AC Spark Plug Speeds Defense Production

"Since it was established in the fall of 1948, the Milwaukee defense plant of the AC Spark Plug Division has substantially expanded its operations. Recently production of aircraft instruments was greatly increased to fill a large order placed by the United States Air Force. Production under this contract will benefit considerably from the long-term cooperation between the Air Force and AC in planning for defense production. The Milwaukee plant is equipped with the latest and most modern facilities for manufacturing these complicated military products.

"As a result of the new order, employment which currently totals 1,300 men and women will be substantially increased and extra working shifts added. The Division's extensive job training program has been greatly enlarged.

Aeroproducts Developing Supersonic Propellers

"For many years, the Aeroproducts Division, located near Dayton, has been engaged in designing and producing aircraft propellers for the armed forces. This Division is at work on contracts from the Navy and Air Force for development of propellers that will operate in a range beyond the speed of sound. In order to provide adequate testing facilities for these new supersonic propellers the Division is building, under contract with the Navy, the world's first supersonic spin pit.

"When completed early in 1951 the pit will be an air-tight chamber sunk below ground level. A vacuum pump will be installed to remove 99% of the atmosphere in the chamber. This will make it possible to rotate the propellers with power from a low horsepower engine. Under normal atmospheric conditions, this could be done only with a much more powerful engine."

MILITARY POLICE

During the first six months of 1950, Military Police of the Army recovered $500,000 in lost and stolen Government property and made 10,000 investigations.

Superliner Decision

In a surprise move, the Department of Defense has dropped its plans to complete the superliner United States as a troop transport and recommended that she be finished as originally designed as a passenger liner.

On 15 Sept., the Government ordered the 48,000 gross ton liner now building for the United States Lines, and three smaller passenger liners, intended for the round-the-world services of the American President Lines, to be completed as troop transports.

Vice Adm. Edward L. Cochrane, Maritime Administrator of the Department of Commerce, announced the return of the ship after receipt of a letter from General George C. Marshall, Secretary of Defense, in which it was stated that the Joint Chiefs of Staff had reconsidered their September decision and had now recommended that the superliner be completed as a passenger liner. General Marshall's letter gave no reason for the change, nor did it refer to any future plans for the three APL liners.

Other sources indicated that it was thought that the superliner would be too large for operations in the Far East, where there are a limited number of ports that could handle such a vessel. The superliner is now about 33% completed and progress had not reached the stage where radical departure in construction had become necessary. It is therefore expected that she will be delivered on schedule in 1952.

U. S. Merchant Fleet

The privately-owned U. S. Flag ocean-going fleet decreased by four vessels in October, the National Federation of American Shipping reported this week.

The Federation's monthly report on the status of the American Merchant Marine showed the decrease attributable to the scrapping of two old ore carriers, and removal of two over-age tankers to storage use only. The privately-owned fleet on 1 Nov., was comprised of 726 dry cargo and combination vessels of 7,320,000 dwt. and 448 tankers of 6,671,000 dwt.

The National Defense Reserve Fleet on 1 Nov. totalled 2,019 vessels, excluding tugs, concrete ships, military auxiliaries, etc., and consisted in part of 1,604 Liberty and 110 Victory type vessels.

Insurance Director

The appointment of Thomas L. Kane as Director of Insurance for the Department of Defense, was announced this week. The new post was established by direction of Secretary of Defense Marshall "to provide under one authority, subject to the policies of the Department of Defense, efficient and economical control of insurance expenditures paid for directly or indirectly by the Department of Defense incident to material procurement."

Mr. Kane will work directly under the chairman of the Munitions Board and will be concerned primarily with property and casualty insurance matters of a staff rather than of an operational nature.

Heads Munitions Board

President Truman has named John D. Small of New York City to be Chairman of the Munitions Board, a post that has been vacant since the resignation of Hubert E. Howard in September.

A graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy in 1915, Mr. Small was commissioned in the Regular Navy and served until 24 April 1926 when he resigned as a lieutenant commander and entered business as vice president of the Dry Ice Corporation. He remained in the Navy Reserve and served in the ranks of commander through commodore during World War II. He was deputy director of the Army-Navy Munitions Board, executive officer of the War Production Board and administrator of the Civilian Production Administration. He remained on active duty until 1947 when he returned to private life as president of the Maxson Food Systems, Inc.

In view of his experience, he is described as particularly qualified for the key Department of Defense post. As the military expansion program is accelerated, the Munitions Board will be given added responsibilities relating to industrial preparedness.

New Defense Ship

Twenty-knot cargo ships now being designed for mass production will be capable of quick modification into 3,000-passenger troop ships, Vice Adm. Edward L. Cochrane, Federal Maritime Administrator, told the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers in New York City late last week.

He said the 12,500-ton vessels would be "vastly superior" to the Liberty and Victory ships of World War II and reported that plans for the new-type ship are being drawn up by the Bethlehem Steel Company's shipbuilding division. It is reported that between 29 and 50 of the 20-knot ships will be ordered. Admiral Cochrane said he would like to see 500 built to replace slower ships, which would be much easier prey for submarines.

Duty for Merchant Marine

The Navy said this week it is making every effort to insure that active duty assignments of officers of the Merchant Marine Reserve enhance their professional careers and enable them to qualify for Merchant Marine licenses.

A Navy directive states that the Bureau of Naval Personnel will assign Merchant Marine Reserve Officers serving on active duty to appropriate type ships whenever practicable. The Bureau, in turn, has requested commanding officers concerned to insure that these officers are assigned to primary duty involving deck or engineering watchstanding as appropriate and to additional duties which will further their professional as well as their naval training.

It was pointed out that Merchant Marine Reserve Officers are divided into two general categories—deck officers and engineering officers. In qualifying for Merchant Marine licenses, they are credited for time served afloat in ships of 1,000 or more gross tons, provided they have performed appropriate duties.

Rear Adm. Buck Elected

Election of Rear Adm. Walter A. Buck, USN-Ret., to the Board of Directors of the Radio Corporation of America is announced by Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, Chairman of the Board of RCA. Admiral Buck, who is Vice President and General Manager of the RCA Victor Division, succeeds Edward J. Nally, who retired because of age. Mr. Nally had been a Director since the formation of the Corporation in 1919 and was RCA's first President, from 1919 to 1923.

Admiral Buck joined RCA upon his retirement on 15 March 1948, after thirty years service, the last two as Paymaster General and Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. He was President of the Radiomarine Corporation of America, a service of RCA, until 7 July 1949, when he was elected Operating Vice President of the RCA Victor Division. His promotion to Vice President and General Manager of the Division was announced 7 July 1950.

U. S. COAST GUARD

VICE Adm. Merlin O'Neill, USCG Commandant, spoke at Arlington National Cemetery on 16 Nov. at ceremonies dedicating the monument on the gravesite of those who lost their lives on the night of 29 Jan. 1945 when the USS Serpens was destroyed off Lunga Beach, Guadalcanal—the largest single Coast Guard disaster in World War II.

A mass recommitment of 250 unidentified dead, including 199 Coast Guardsmen, 50 Army personnel and one member of the U. S. Public Health Service, was held at Arlington National Cemetery on 15 June 1949.

The following is the text of Admiral O'Neill's address given at the dedication ceremony:

"More than a year ago . . . in June of 1949 . . . I came to this hallowed ground with a heavy heart . . . here to witness, with many of you, the recommitment services for many victims of a bitter war.

"Now we gather again . . . in sorrow and deep humility . . . to pay all the homage within our power to shipmates and members of fellow services who met death in a great disaster.

"The loss of the United States Ship Serpens on the night of January 29, 1945, was one of the greatest single ship casualties suffered by our armed forces during World War II. And it claimed not only Coast Guardsmen, but soldiers of our Army and a member of the Public Health Service, for in such fashion were we integrated as we fought shoulder to shoulder against a common enemy.

"Today we meet to dedicate a memorial . . . a perpetual reminder to the generations which will follow us of the grim price that has been paid so that our country may remain free, and the rights of its citizens held inviolate.

"In fact, this memorial was dedicated a little over five years ago by those men to whom we pay tribute now.

"But it does present an opportunity . . . feeble and inadequate as this effort may be . . . to insist that their sacrifice, and the sacrifices of their loved ones, shall never be forgotten.

"We cannot undo the past, because we are only human. The days of our lives, too, are numbered. But we can insure, when the passage of time has mercifully dulled our grief, that we can be intensely proud of what they did and that their memory shall be respected and honored forever."

Southwind Overhauling

The icebreaker and former Russian lend-lease ship, the USS Atka, commissioned originally by the Coast Guard as the Cutter Southwind, left Pearl Harbor early this month for shipyard overhaul on the east coast of the United States. The vessel was turned over to the Russians during the latter part of World War II, was renamed then the Admiral Makarov, and after its return to the U. S. in December 1949 was renamed again as the Atka.

Commanding officer of the ship is Comdr. R. B. Kelly, USN, renowned as "PT Boat Kelly," the officer who helped evacuate General of the Army Douglas MacArthur from Corregidor to Australia early in 1942.

After overhaul, the ship is slated for North Atlantic Patrol Duty.

Transfer Patrol Craft

Military aid for the government of Burma, under terms of the Mutual Defense Assistance Program, will begin moving forward this month, when ten 83-foot Coast Guard patrol craft are transferred to the Burmese government to assist them in patrolling the navigable river systems of Burma. The shallow-draft patrol craft are being rehabilitated at the U. S. Coast Guard Yard, Curtis Bay, Md. The vessels were part of the Coast Guard Reserve Fleet at Curtis Bay, and Cape May, N. J.

New York Coast Guard Post

Capt. Clarence H. Peterson has assumed duties as deputy under Rear Adm. Louis B. Olson, Eastern Area Commander at New York City. He has been chief of the Operations Division for the Eastern Area and succeeds Capt. W. R. Richards.

Petty Officer Promotions

Coast Guard personnel officials report that advancements to and in petty officer ratings to fill vacancies created by the current expansion program will be provisional, although Headquarters will continue to issue permanent appointments within limits of the normal complement, subject to the following stipulations:

(a) Except for permanent appointments to pay grade 4 already issued by Headquarters, effective on or before 16 Nov. 1950, appointments to that pay grade will be provisional only.

(b) Advancements of recalled reserve and retired personnel and of those serving on an involuntary extension of enlistment will be provisional only.

(c) With the above exceptions personnel advanced to a provisional rating in pay grades 5, 6, and 7 will be placed on the waiting list maintained at Headquarters for permanent appointments. Selection for permanent appointments will be made from this waiting list whenever vacancies occur in the normal complement.

The normal complement is the original allowance authorized for fiscal 1951, exclusive of the port security program or subsequent emergency expansion.

Photographic Contest

The Department of Defense has announced the opening of the Third Inter-Service Photography Contest, with the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL Grand Prize Trophy to go to the Service earning the most points in the competition. In addition, individual prizes will be awarded the winners in each of the various classes.

Preliminary contests, open to Service personnel of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard will be held at installation and major command levels. In addition to other members of the Services, members of Reserve components, on active duty for more than 90 days, are eligible to participate. Finals at which Service-wide winners will be chosen and the Grand Prize Trophy awarded will take place at the Pentagon, Washington, D. C., on or about 9 July, 1951.

Selection of the grand prize-winning photograph will be made from hundreds of entries submitted by all of the Services, from pictures entered in preliminary contests. Closing entry date at the installation level will be not later than February, 1951, and contests will be conducted at major command levels not later than April, 1951.

An Inter-Service Photography Contest Committee will direct the competition. It will establish individual prizes, select the panel of judges, and make other arrangements for the final.

The ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL Grand Prize Trophy is a beautiful sterling silver punch bowl donated by this publication two years ago as our annual award for the Service winning the largest number of points in all classes and categories of the competition. It was won by the Marine Corps in 1949 and the Air Force in 1950.

First, second, and third individual prizes and two honorable mention trophies will be awarded in the finals in each of four categories of the salon photographs, the color class and the snapshot class. An individual grand prize will be awarded for the salon photograph judged to be the best submitted in the contest.

Salon pictures will be grouped in four categories in accordance with subject matter depicting service life on duty and at leisure, landscapes and architecture, people and customs, and general pictorial, with prizes awarded in each category.

Army Enlisted Promotions

The Army has relatively fewer enlisted men in the top three pay grades than the Navy and Air Force, according to data reported by Secretary Frank Pace, Jr.

In his semi-annual report covering the last six months of fiscal year 1950, Secretary Pace noted that the Army had only 22.5 per cent of its enlisted personnel in the three top grades, compared with 30.3 per cent for the Air Force and 35.1 for the Navy.

The Marine Corps percentage of top three-graders was 20.8.

Legion Chief's Homecoming

Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall will be the guest speaker at Homecoming festivities at Dawson, Ga., on 24 Nov. honoring American Legion National Commander Erle Cocke, Jr.

The Defense Secretary will present the 29-year-old Legion chief to his fellow townsmen in the afternoon at the Dawson High School stadium. In the evening, the General will address a dinner group at nearby Ft. Benning at which he and Commander Cocke will be jointly honored. The Commandant of Ft. Benning, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, will be host-toastmaster for the banquet which will conclude the day's celebration.

RESERVE TRAINING SHIPS

The Navy maintains approximately 100 Naval Reserve ships, of which about one-fourth are permanently-moored submarines used for alongside training.

Army Doctors Honored

Seven officers of the Army Medical Corps have been certified by American Specialty Boards. The officers and their designated specialty follow:

In the field of dermatology and syphilology—Maj. Marshall B. Guthrie, Lt. Col. William N. Piper, Col. George Pratzak, Capt. Edward F. Gudgel; in otolaryngology, Lt. Col. Bryon G. McKibben, Lt. Col. Norman E. King, and in Preventive Medicine and Public Health, Col. Francis E. Council.

Appointed Post Chaplain

Chaplain (Maj.) L. G. H. Schliesser, 11th Airborne Division Chaplain, was also named Post Chaplain at Fort Campbell, Ky., recently. He succeeded Chaplain (Maj.) Carl Stanley, who had been Post Chaplain since early last spring.
